IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.

General Walker's Arrival and Immediate Discharge from Custody.

HIS INTERVIEW WITH SECRETARY CASS.

Commodore Paulding's Account of Walker's Arrest.

The Indians of Utah and California—Volunteers in California against the Mormons, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 29.

Gen. WALKER arrived here to-night. He was received here, and at all the towns on the road, with great enthusiasm. Marshal RUSSELL repudiates the idea of holding him as a prisoner.

Capt. RUSSELL delivered his dispatches from PAULDING, to-day, and they were considered in Cabinet meeting. Secretary FLOYD is especially earnest in his opposition to the efforts to destroy the filibusters.

Senator MASON says he will introduce resolutions in Congress directing the President to send WALKER back in a national vessel.

The news received that the Kansas Constitution is united with the Slavery clause authority disappointed Northern men, who would have sustained the Lecompton scheme if Slavery had been excluded, but have not now. S.

(FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 29.

The following is Commodore PAULDING's letter to the Secretary of the Navy, detailing the circumstances under which he arrested Gen. WALKER:

FLAG-SHIP SARATOGA, OFF ASPINWALL, Dec. 15, 1857.

SIR: My letter of the 8th inst. informed the Department that I had broken up the camp of General WALKER at Punta Arenas, disarmed his lawless followers, and sent them to Norfolk in the Saratoga. The General came here with me, and will take passage in one of the steamers for New-York, where he will present himself to the Marshal of the District.

The Department being in possession of all the facts in relation to General WALKER's escape, with his followers, from the United States, as well as the letters of Captain CHADWICK and General WALKER to me after he landed at Punta Arenas, the merits of the whole question will, I presume, be fully comprehended. I could not regard General WALKER and his followers in any other light than as outlaws who had escaped from the vigilance of the officers of the Government, and left our shores for the purpose of rapine and murder, and I saw no other way to vindicate the Law and redeem the honor of our country than by disarming and sending them home. In doing so I am sensible of the responsibility I have incurred, and confidently look to the Government for my justification.

Regarded in its true light, the case appears to me a clear one, and the points few and strong. WALKER came to Point Arenas from the United States, having, in violation of law, set on foot a military organization to make war upon a people with whom we are at peace. He landed there with armed men and munitions of war, in defiance of the guns of a ship-of-war placed there to prevent his landing. With nothing to show that he acted by authority, he formed a camp and hoisted the Nicaraguan flag, called it the "Head-quarters of the Army in Nicaragua," and signed himself the Commander-in-Chief. With this pretension, he claimed the right of a lawful government over all persons and things within sight of his flag. Without right or authority, he landed fifty men at the mouth of the river Colorado, seized the Fort of Castillo on the San Juan River, captured steamers and the goods of merchants in transit to the interior, killed men, and made prisoners of the peaceful inhabitants, sending to the harbor of San Juan del Norte some thirty or forty men, women and children in the steamer Morgan.

In doing these things without the show of authority, they were guilty of rapine and murder, and must be regarded as outlaws and pirates. They can have no claim to be regarded in any other light. Humanity as well as law, justice and national honor decreed the dispersion of these lawless men.

The remnant of the miserable beings who surrendered at Rivas were conveyed in this ship last Sunday to New-York, and their sufferings are yet fresh in the memory of all on board.

Besides the sufferings that must necessarily be inflicted upon an innocent and unoffending people, these lawless followers of General WALKER, misguided and deceived into a career of crime, would doubtless, have perished in Central America, or their mutilated and festering bodies would have been brought back to their friends at the expense of the country.

For the above reasons, which appear to my mind quite sufficient, I have disarmed and sent to the United States General WILLIAM WALKER and his outlawed and piratical followers for trial, or for whatever action the Government in its wisdom may think proper to pursue.

Captain CHADWICK, of H. B. M. ship Brunswick, offered to cooperate with me in removing the party from Point Arenas, but as they were my countrymen, I deemed it proper to decline the participation of a foreign flag. H. PAULDING.

In a letter dated Dec. 11, Commodore PAULDING gives the particulars of the landing of the marines and seamen at Point Arenas under circumstances of great difficulty, yet everything was accomplished in so seamanlike and skillful a manner that it was accomplished in the shortest possible time without loss or accident. To the excellent discipline and fine bearing of the officers and men, he says, he is indebted in the performance of this most unpleasant service, for the exemption of all casualty or accident. There was no one injured, and no loss of any kind sustained. No commanding officer was ever supported by a body of officers and men in a manner more highly to command his admiration and respect.

The Cabinet had the matter before them to-day. Although the arrest of General WALKER is not strictly justified by the instructions to Commodore PAULDING, it is conceived that the case is very much palliated by the circumstances under which, as explained by him, it was effected. WALKER will be released from his present arrest, and it is probable that a process will be commenced to bring him to trial for violation of the neutrality laws.

Capt. RUSSEL had a long interview with the President to-day, and detailed to him all the circumstances connected with the arrest of WALKER.

Gen. WALKER arrived this evening, accompanied by Marshal RUSSELL, T. F. MEAGHER and MALCOLM CAMPBELL. He was received with cheers by a large concourse of people as he entered his quarters at Brown's Hotel.

Shortly after Capt. ISAIAH RUSSELL with General WALKER repaired to the State Department, where the latter stated to Secretary CASS that he had received a communication from Commodore PAULDING, saying he had arrested Gen. WALKER for carrying on an warlike and military expedition against Nicaragua, and that Gen. WALKER had promised him (PAULDING) upon his honor to surrender himself to Capt. RUSSELL, as Marshal for the Southern District of New-York, on arrival in that City. Capt. RUSSELL stated that Gen. WALKER had done so, and that he (RUSSELL) had accompanied him to Washington to ascertain the views of the Government.

Gen. CASS replied that the Executive Department of the Government did not recognize General Walker as a prisoner; that he had no directions to give concerning him, and that it was only through the action of the judiciary that he (WALKER) could be lawfully held in custody to answer any charges which may be brought against him.

Capt. RUSSELL then informed General WALKER he had no further authority to detain him. Both then withdrew.

The Indian Bureau have received official information denying the truth of the reports that the dissatisfaction of the Indians in the Utah Territory, created by the Mormons, had been communicated to the Indians on the borders of California, and especially those in the Southern portion of that State. All remained quiet, and so far as appearances are concerned there is no reason to anticipate a different state of things.

Private letters from California state that two regiments of volunteers were ready at the tap of the drum to advance against the Mormons, and that ten regiments could be mustered in less than sixty days for the same service.

The Administration and Commodore Paulding—Captain Chatard of the Saratoga—The Embarrassment Growing out of Walker's Arrest—A Parallel for the Mesera Case, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 28, 1857.

Nothing could be more emphatic than the language in which the President, Secretary of State, and Secretary of the Navy protest that Commodore PAULDING greatly exceeded his instructions in invading Nicaragua, and arresting Gen. WALKER and his band of "emigrants." There are many who persist in believing that, after all, he has only done what he was secretly authorized to do. I think the fact only for the purpose of saying that the existence of any such instructions is utterly inconsistent with the positive declarations of the members of the Administration whom I have named—and who do not hesitate to characterize the Commodore's act as one of extreme and inexcusable folly. Capt. CHATARD, of the Saratoga, has been deprived of his command and ordered home for trial for failing to stop the Fashion when she carried the filibusters in, and now Commodore PAULDING is in imminent danger of severe punishment for having gone into a foreign jurisdiction to arrest the same men. Let me mention here, by the way, that Capt. CHATARD, the day after the Fashion entered the port of San Juan, wrote a very penitent letter to the Commodore, claiming himself severely for having permitted her to pass unchallenged, but excusing himself by the declaration that he never suspected, until too late, that she was a filibuster, or that she had more than half-a-dozen men on board of her.

Some very important and interesting questions arise out of the present state of facts. WALKER and his men have been brought home, and the General is in the hands of the United States Marshal. The President, however, does not pretend that he is in custody upon any lawful authority,—and so Capt. RUSSELL will have been informed ere this reaches you. True he may be sued upon his forfeited recognizance; but he cannot be arrested and held upon that except in the presence of a transcript from the New-Orleans Court, and an order for his arrest emanating from the same tribunal.

Had the arrest been made upon the high seas, WALKER and his men could be held, of course, upon the charge of violating the Neutrality laws; but it is very questionable whether they can be so held, as the facts now appear. They have been kidnapped in a foreign jurisdiction, just as MARTIN KOSZTA was; and the principle established in the KOSZTA case, instead of vindicating the conduct of Commodore PAULDING, establishes the right of filibusters to be sent back and placed precisely in the position in which the Commodore found them. I think you will find the cases parallel.

KOSZTA was kidnapped upon Turkish soil by an Austrian force—the Austrian Government claiming his allegiance, with a view to taking him to Austria for trial upon an alleged offence against that Government. He denied allegiance to Austria, claiming that he had renounced it. Capt. INGRAHAM sustained his right to decide for himself where his allegiance was due, and the Government of the United States, through its Secretary of State, denounced, in the strongest possible terms, the conduct of Austria in invading a foreign soil, to kidnap one of its own original subjects, who had cast off his allegiance to them.

So, in the present case, General WALKER and his men, having availed themselves of the right of expatriation which our own Government has asserted through its patriotic Secretary of State, Gen. CASS—threw off their allegiance to the United States—asserted themselves subjects of Nicaragua, and, as such, proceeded to take part in shaping its political character. In pursuance of this right, they are upon Nicaraguan soil, and an American force goes into the jurisdiction of Nicaragua, kidnaps them there, and sends them back to the United States for trial for an offence committed here. In KOSZTA's case it was decided that he was entitled to be set down again in the streets of Smyrna, clothed with all the rights and privileges of which he was possessed when the minions of Austria seized him. Why, then, are not WALKER and his men entitled to precisely the same reparation?

It may be answered that this casting off American allegiance by WALKER & Co., is all a sham. So it was said of KOSZTA; but we held that he had the right to decide for himself. Who is to decide in the other case? We have no law providing a form of expatriation, and until we have it, the predeclarations and the acts of the individual ex-patriots must settle the question.

Commodore PAULDING had no power to assume the right to decide the question,—yet he did precisely that,—for except upon the claim that they were American citizens and not Nicaraguans, he could not have deluded himself into the idea that he had the least apology for interference. If WALKER had been arrested within American jurisdiction, and had set up in defence that he was a citizen of Nicaragua, it would have been a question for the American Court to decide of which country he was the subject; but it is exceedingly doubtful whether any such question can be submitted to a United States Court in the case of men kidnapped in a foreign jurisdiction, and so not legally in custody for trial.

To admit that the United States have acquired any sort of jurisdiction over WALKER and his men, under these circumstances, would be to establish a most dangerous precedent—one which might and would be cited against us in the future by other nations greatly to our disadvantage. Depend upon it that the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN will never sanction its establishment. What steps they will take to repair the error it is too soon to surmise; but that Commodore PAULDING—as pure-hearted and well-meaning a man as ever lived—has plunged the Government into a perfect sea of embarrassment and complications is very certain.

I have said nothing in regard to the morale of the case. My object has been simply to discuss this question in its political and legal aspects. Denounce WALKER and his cause as we may, all will admit the fallacy of the principle which justifies evil that good may come. We rejoice, sometimes, that a ruffian has met a well-deserved death, and yet deplore the fact that he was executed by Judge Lynch; so we may be glad that WALKER's expedition is broken up and dispersed, while we cannot but deplore the violation of international law, and of our own Constitution, in the accomplishment of such a result. True, Nicaragua will not complain of the violation of her sovereignty; but that does not mend the matter any. If a Commodore is sustained by public sentiment in this instance, unauthorized war may be commenced upon a foreign soil, at any time, by any other officer of the United States who happens to think he will be justified in the exercise of a power which the Constitution confers on Congress alone. These suggestions, I trust, will not be found unworthy of careful consideration.

The war of the dispatents over the Nicaragua Transit is not yet over; and by the way, let me suggest to a certain New-York "Commodore" that if the United States authorities succeed in getting hold of the originals of certain letters of his to high functionaries of Costa Rica, advising them how they may thwart the policy of the United States in Central America, he will be in imminent danger of indictment and conviction of treason, or something akin to it. A certain "General" in your midst may also take the hint and profit by it. S.

The Contract for the Senate Binding.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 28, 1857.

Party hacks are carping at the course of Hon. ROBERT JOHNSON, of Arkansas, in having voted as Chairman of the Committee on Printing to give the contract for binding the Senate documents to CHARLES BEVAN, of this city, a member of the American Party, and therefore a political opponent of the Administration. The complaint is altogether unjust, and, to some extent, unfounded. The associate of Mr. BEVAN is Mr. PETTIBONE, a practical and established bookbinder, and a life-long Democrat. Before awarding the contract to any person, Mr. JOHNSON moved the reduction of compensation 20 per cent. below the prices at which it has been executed by Mr. McGURNS and his predecessors for the last twelve years. This motion prevailed by the votes of Mr. JOHNSON and Gen. CARNES against that of Mr. FITZPATRICK. The bids of Messrs. BUTLER & PETTIBONE were found to be the lowest from responsible parties, and were, of course, accepted. This reduction will effect an important saving to the Government. The cost of the binding for the last Congress was $299,000, of which the Senate's portion was probably less than $120,000. It is estimated by competent parties that the profits on the contract assigned to Mr. BEVAN and his partner will not exceed five per cent. At a time like this, when the Treasury is so nearly empty that even the salaries of members of Congress cannot be paid, such leaks and fissures in the public coffers as have been opened by the binding and printing jobs of past Congresses ought to be stopped, and Mr. JOHNSON deserves warm applause for his movement in that direction.

The Chairman of the Printing Committee contemplates another important reform. He will support the project of a Government Printing-Office whenever presented under favorable auspices. In the meantime, he proposes to introduce a resolution prohibiting the printing of any greater number of any public document than may be required to supply each member of Congress with one copy, unless by a law duly passed and signed by the President. This will lop off one enormous source of extravagance and corruption.

The Navy Department has received no dispatches from Commodore PAULDING this morning which disclose other facts respecting the arrest of WALKER than are contained in the published accounts. A.

Later from Kansas.

THE ELECTION AT LEAVENWORTH—ILLEGAL VOTING BY MISSOURIANS—ORDER FOR THE ARREST OF GENERAL LANE, &C.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, Dec. 29.

Leavenworth, Kansas, advices of the 25th inst. give the vote of that city as 238 for Slavery, and 9 against. Much excitement prevailed, there being many Missourians present, some of whom voted, after swearing in their votes. The form of oath administered was, "Are you at this instant an inhabitant of this Territory?" Several Missourians had been arrested, and Judge LECOMPTE had issued writs of habeas corpus for their release.

General CARNOUN had been burned in effigy.

ELI MOORE had been shot in the leg by a German.

It was rumored that Governor DENVER had issued an order for the arrest of General LANE.

THE LATE FIGHT AT FORT SCOTT, ETC.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

LAWRENCE, K. T., Saturday, Dec. 19, 1857.

A messenger reached this place last night, informing General LANE that he had taken part in the late conflict, and left immediately after for reinforcements. He gives us the following information:

Dr. LITTLE, known as one of the most radical and dangerous Pro-Slavery leaders, in company with G. W. CLARK, the murderer of BARBER, residents of Fort Scott, have been doing all in their power to annoy the Free-State citizens in that vicinity. Dr. LITTLE has been acting as Deputy U. S. Marshal, and with a posse would sally out to collect taxes. If his demands were not complied with promptly, he would distrain property and sell it to Missourians from the adjoining Missouri Counties for a mere trifle. They had made arrests under the rebellion act, now repealed by the late Legislature.

In attempting to make arrests at the Little Osage River, 16 miles from Fort Scott, they were resisted. They then increased their posse to 100, and surrounded the Free State men, numbering thirty-five, who continued the exercises in a log cabin. On refusing to surrender, Dr. LITTLE said, "If you do not surrender we will blow you to h—l." "Blow away," replied Capt. ADAMS, which was answered by a volley of bullets. Capt. ADAMS returned the fire, killing three Missourians and wounding Dr. LITTLE. Both parties then sent for reinforcements.

This occurred at 3 o'clock on Wednesday last. General LANE had ordered Captain ADAMS to maintain his position at all hazards. The Missourians have several prisoners. Among them is Rev. Mr. STEWART, of Wakarusa, well known as the "fighting parson." Small companies from most of the Free-State towns have gone to the relief of their friends. A company of riflemen, with a brass howitzer, will leave this place to-morrow morning at 3 o'clock. General LANE will accompany them. Acting-Governor STANTON has sent a Company of 100 Dragoons as a posse comitatus.

General WHITMAN left this morning for Lecompton, to demand of Governor STANTON the arms—of which there are over 200 stand—taken by Governor GEARY from emigrants. General W. acts as Agent of the National Kansas Committee. The coolest, wisest, richest, as well as the poorest men in the Territory, see no hope for peace. We cannot have it till the usurpers are out of the way.

The Clipper Ship Grey Eagle in Distress.

CHARLESTON, Tuesday, Dec. 29.

The steamship Columbia, at this port from New-York, spoke off Cape Hatteras the clipper ship Grey Eagle, from City Point, Va., bound to Rio Janeiro, with a cargo of flour, dismasted. The Grey Eagle refused assistance, but the Columbia took off seven passengers and brought them to this port.

Suicides.

SUICIDE OF CHARLES W. BARHYDT.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Tuesday, Dec. 29.

CHARLES W. BARHYDT, of the firm of CHARLES W. and GILES S. BARHYDT, grocers of this city, was found dead in his store this morning about 7 o'clock, stabbed to the heart and with one of his thumbs blown off. Marks of powder were also on his breast. A pistol was found near him with the barrel burnted, also a dirk covered with blood. An inquest was held on the body, and a verdict was rendered that his death was caused by his own hands.

SUICIDE OF M. N. ORR.

ELECTION RIOTING IN QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, Tuesday, Dec. 29.

There were a number of serious disturbances at the polls yesterday. Three Irishmen were killed and many others seriously injured. The military had to be called to preserve the peace. The Ministerialists have about 2,600 majority. Worse disturbances are anticipated.

The News of the Seizure of Walker in New-Orleans.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, Dec. 28.

The receipt of the news of General WALKER's capture caused general indignation in this City. The announcement was made at SALTERS & ROGERS' Amphitheatre, and the St. Charles' Theatre causing great excitement. A meeting to express the feeling of the community is called for 12 o'clock to-morrow. The feeling here in favor of reinforcing Colonel ANDERSON is intense.

The Rhode Island Central Bank.

PROVIDENCE, Tuesday, Dec. 29.

The Supreme Court, this morning, decreed a perpetual injunction upon the Rhode Island Central Bank.

The Fillibuster Wars in Nicaragua.

Chronological History of Walker's Expeditions—1855—57.

The following Record of the Fillibustering operations of General WILLIAM WALKER in Nicaragua, from the time of his first expedition, in the early part of 1855, to the breaking-up of the second expedition during the present month, will prove useful for reference:

1855.

May 4—WALKER leaves San Francisco for Nicaragua, with a force of 62 men.

June 11—Arrives at Realejo; accepts the invitation of the Democratic faction to espouse their cause; subsequently marches against the "Serviles" at Rivas, but is defeated, and falls back on Realejo.

Sept. 2—Again attacks Rivas, and defeats the enemy.

Oct. 11—Captures the city of Granada.

Oct. 23—Don PATRICIO RIVAS named Provisional President of Nicaragua; WALKER appointed General-in-Chief.

October—WALKER receives large reinforcements from the Northern States and California; Col. PARKER H. FRENCH appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States.

1856.

January—Col. FRENCH, the new Minister, arrested in New-York for enlisting soldiers for Nicaragua.

Jan. 22—Nicaragua suspends diplomatic relations with the United States.

February—Col. SCHLESSINGER, Commissioner from Nicaragua, expelled from Costa Rica; WALKER immediately issues a declaration of war.

March 20—Nicaraguan forces defeated at Santa Rosa by the Costa Ricans.

April 7—Rivas occupied by the Costa Ricans.

April 11—WALKER drives them out of the town; cholera ravages the Costa Rican troops, and they evacuate the Nicaraguan territory.

May—Padre VIGIL appointed Minister to the United States, vice FRENCH; he meets a cold reception.

June 20—WALKER dissolves the Provisional Government, and seizes the reins of power.

June 24—President RIVAS takes refuge in Leon, with his Cabinet, and enters into alliance with Costa Rica.

August—Señor SALINAS, of the Rivas Cabinet, shot, by WALKER's orders, for high treason.

Oct. 12—WALKER defeats the Guatemalans at Granada.

Oct.—Nov.—Severe conflicts between the Costa Ricans and WALKER; dreadful suffering at Massaya; Granada destroyed and abandoned; WALKER retreats to Rivas, where he is closely besieged.

Dec. 22.—Costa Rica seizes the Transit Route; WALKER's communications cut off.

1857.

January—Col. LOCKRIDGE, with reinforcements for WALKER, turned back by the Costa Ricans.

Jan. 24—HENNINGSEN defeated by the Allies under CANAS.

Jan. 28—HENNINGSEN again defeated by the Allies at St. George.

Jan. 30—HENNINGSEN falls back on Rivas.

March 6—WALKER repulses attack of the Allies on Rivas.

March 16—Defeats the Allies at St. George.

May 1—Walker surrenders at Rivas, to Capt. DAVIS, U. S. S. St. Mary's, with his staff and 200 men; after suffering extraordinary hardships during the siege. The first Expedition ended.

May 27—WALKER arrives at New-Orleans.

June 15—He protests against the conduct of Capt. DAVIS, in a letter to the President.

June 16—Arrives in New-York.

June 27—The Wabash reaches New-York with a portion of WALKER's force, in a destitute condition.

July 29—The Cyane reaches Boston with the remainder of WALKER's force.

July—Costa Rica awards the Transit Grant to WEBSTER and HARRIS.

Aug. 7—Costa Rica issues a decree against WALKER as a pirate.

Aug. 18—The Tennessee reaches New-York with 250 deserters from WALKER's force.

Aug. to Nov.—WALKER and HENNINGSEN actively engaged in organizing another Expedition; recruits raised in Mississippi, Texas and other Southern States.

Nov. 10—WALKER arrested in New-Orleans for violation of the Neutrality Laws; gives bail in $2,000 to appear and answer.

Nov. 11—WALKER departs from New-Orleans for Nicaragua.

Nov. 13—Embarks on board the steamer Fashion in Mobile Bay, with 200 men for a second Fillibustering Expedition.

Nov. 25—Lands at Punta Arenas, passing U. S. S. Saratoga, without exciting suspicion.

Nov. 30—Establishes headquarters at Punta Arenas; orders officers of the Saratoga to return to their ship.

Nov. 30—Capt. CHATARD of the Saratoga threatens punishment to WALKER in case of his interference with the English mails.

Nov. 30—WALKER addresses to Commodore PAULDING a remonstrance against the conduct of Capt. CHATARD.

Dec. 4 and 5—Col. ANDERSON ascends the San Juan; captures steamers Bolivia, Morgan, Ogden and Virgin, and with the latter 40 Costa Ricans; seizes Fort Castillo and occupies it with 45 men.

Dec. 6—United States frigate Wabash, and H. B. M. steamers Brunswick and Leopard arrive at San Juan.

Dec. 7—United States steamer Fulton joins company. Capt. FAYSSOUX repulsed from the San Juan River by a force of United States marines.

Dec. 8—Com. PAULDING dispatches a force of 225 marines, under Capt. ENGLE, to demand the surrender of WALKER at Punta Arenas; WALKER yields, is conveyed on board the Fulton, where he has an interview with Com. PAULDING; the fillibuster officers ordered on board the Saratoga; the privates disarmed and placed on the Wabash.

Dec. 9—A party of United States marines from the Saratoga lands and seizes WALKER's stores at Punta Arenas.

Dec. 18—The prisoners on the Wabash (150 in number) transferred to the Saratoga, which immediately set sail for Norfolk, Va. WALKER gives his parole to proceed to New-York and surrender himself to the U. S. Marshal. Col. ANDERSON and 45 men are left in possession of Fort Castillo. The Second Expedition ended.

Dec. 27—WALKER arrives in New-York, by the Northern Light, a prisoner on parole.

Dec. 28—He surrenders himself to the custody of U. S. Marshal RUSSELL.

Dec. 28—The Government censures the action of Com. PAULDING, and disavows the responsibility.

Dec. 29—WALKER leaves New-York for Washington in custody of the U. S. Marshal.

THE MORMON ARMY.—The forces of the Mormons are estimated to amount to about 5,000 men, officered as follows:

Daniel H. Wells, Lieutenant-General.
James Ferguson, Aujutant-General.
A. P. Rockwood, Commissary-General.
Geo. D. Grant, Brigadier-General of Cavalry.
H. B. Clawson, Aid-de-Camp.
L. W. Hardy, Division Commissary.
W. H. Kimball, Lieutenant-Colonel of Cavalry.
Wm. Hyde, Lieutenant-Colonel of Infantry.
E. T. Burton, Major of the Life Guards.

THE MORMON WAR.

Important Correspondence from the Utah Expedition.

Threatenings of Brigham Young.

Determined Purpose of the Mormons to Resist the United States Troops by Force.

The Washington Union, of yesterday, publishes the following important dispatch from Col. JOHNSTON, of the Army of Utah, inclosing communications from BRIGHAM YOUNG to Col. ALEXANDER, and other documents. We published in yesterday's issue some brief extracts from the correspondence, received by telegraph from Washington:

HEAD-QUARTERS ARMY OF UTAH, Black's Fork, three miles below mouth of Ham's Fork, on route to Salt Lake City, Nov. 3, 1857.

MAJOR: I have the honor to inform you that I arrived here on the 2d instant. This place I designated in a communication to Colonel ALEXANDER, subsequent to my letter to you of the 16th of October, from South Pass, as the one at which the force, (consisting of one squadron of dragoons, two companies of the Tenth Infantry, and one company of volunteers—in all about 300 men,) under the command of Colonel C. F. SMITH, charged with the duty of protecting the trains of supplies for the army, could, with the most facility, join the main body. Colonel SMITH, with his command, and the numerous trains guarded by it, reached here on the 3d instant. The march was slow and tedious, and effected in eight days—averaging 11 miles per day. Although the road was excellent and the weather fine, it was not possible to make any more rapid progress, on account of the broken-down condition of the draught animals. Trains, including settlers and merchants, destined for Salt Lake, (which I would not allow to go on,) in as close order as they could be made to travel, occupied a space of five or six miles. No molestation whatever was attempted by the Mormons, which may be attributed to the presence of the cavalry and the judicious dispositions and vigilance of Col. SMITH. Yesterday and to-day have been occupied in making arrangements necessary for a forward movement, which my orders will explain. To-morrow I will march upon Fort Bridger and dislodge any force I may find there, and await the arrival of Col. COOK, when, as the approach of Winter is too near to attempt the passage of the Wasatch range of mountains with a probability of success, I will seize upon the district mentioned in my letter from South Pass, and occupy it until an advance is practicable.

The communications from BRIGHAM YOUNG to Col. ALEXANDER, and Elder TAYLOR to Captain MARCY, and the orders of D. WELLS, the commander of the Mormons, (herewith inclosed,) and the acts of the legislative assembly at the last session, show a matured and settled design on the part of the sect of Mormons to hold and occupy this Territory independent of and trespassing of the authority of the United States. They have, with premeditation, placed themselves in rebellion against the Union, and entertain the insane design of establishing a form of government thoroughly despotic and utterly repugnant to our institutions. Occupying, as they do, an attitude of rebellion and open defiance to the Government, connected with numerous overt acts of treason, (see orders and commissions herewith, issued by the leaders,) I have ordered that whenever they are met with arms they may be treated as enemies.

In my letter from the South Pass, I submitted to the consideration of the General-in-Chief the necessity on the part of the Government of prompt and vigorous action; that the time for further argument is past; and, in my opinion, the people of the United States must now act or submit to a usurpation of their territory, and engrafting upon our institutions a social organization and political principles incompatible with our own. Lest that letter may not have been received, I send herewith a copy.

The state of things now existing has not been brought about by the movements of troops in this direction; for these people understand the relation of the military to the civil power of the Government as well as any other portion of the inhabitants of the Union, and that the arms of our soldiers are designed for the preservation of the peaceful condition of society, and not for its disturbance. Their conduct, as I have before stated as my opinion, results from a settled determination on their part not to submit to the authority of the United States, or any other outside of their Church.

Inclosed is a statement of the Chief Commissary of the amount of subsistence destroyed under the orders of BRIGHAM YOUNG. The loss, although great, is less than I apprehended. A supply early in the Spring must be forwarded. It should reach here by the 1st of June. The supplies of the contractors, suttlers, &c., for the employes, have been exhausted; so long a detention with the army was not anticipated by them. It is become necessary to give them bread, as there is no other source from which they can obtain it. Should a long interval intervene without hearing from me, you need only attribute it to the difficulty of sending expresses across the mountains in the Winter months. The officers and men are in fine health, and animated with an ardent desire to discharge their duties faithfully.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

A. S. JOHNSTON, Col. 2d Cavalry.

P. S.—We have made one day's march since the date of this, and are now (November 7) awaiting the arrival of trains, delayed yesterday by a storm. Our trains occupy, in as close order as they can travel, the road for thirteen or fourteen miles. Therefore, the rear cannot move till late in the day. A. S. J.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory, Oct. 14, 1857.

COLONEL: In consideration of our relative positions, you acting in your capacity as commander of the United States forces, in obedience, as you have stated, to orders from the President of the United States, and I as Governor of this Territory, impelled by every sense of justice, honor, integrity, and patriotism to resist what I consider to be a direct infringement of the rights of the citizens of Utah, and an act of usurpation and tyranny unprecedented in the history of the United States, permit me frankly to address you as a citizen of the United States, untrammeled by the usages of official dignity or military etiquette.

As citizens of the United States we both, it is presumable, feel strongly attached to the Constitution and institutions of our common country, and, as gentlemen, should probably agree in sustaining the dear-bought liberties bequeathed by our fathers, the positions in which we are individually placed being the only apparent cause of our present antagonism; you, as Colonel commanding, finding that you have a rigid duty to perform in obedience to orders, and I, a still more important duty to the people of this Territory.

I need not here reiterate what I have mentioned in my official proclamation, and what I and the people of this Territory universally believe firmly to be the object of the Administration in the present expedition against Utah—viz: the destruction, if not the entire annihilation, of the Mormon community, solely upon religious grounds, and without any pretext whatever—for the Administration do know from the most reliable sources that the base reports circulated by BURNHISEN, and others of their mean officials, are barefaced calumnies. They do, moreover, know that the people of Utah have been more peaceable and law-abiding than the people of any other Territory of the United States, and have never resisted even the wish of the President of the United States, nor treated with indignity a single individual coming to the Territory under his authority, although the conduct and deportment of many of them have merited, and in any other State or Territory would have met with summary punishment. But when the President of the United States so far degrades his high position and prostitutes the highest gift of the people so as to make use of the military power (intended only for the protection of the people's rights) to crush the people's liberties, and compel them to resume allegiance or lose to self-respect so to accept appointments claim the known and expressed wish of the people, and so craven and degraded as to need an army to protect them in their position, we feel that we would be recreant to every principle of self-respect, honor, integrity and patriotism to bow tamely to such high-handed tyranny, a parallel to which is only found in the attempts made by the British Government in its most corrupt stages against the rights, liberties and lives of our forefathers.

Now, Colonel, I do not charge you, nor those serving under you, with the instigation of the execration. I consider that you are only the agent made use of by the Administration—probably unwillingly so—to further their infamous designs. What high-minded gentleman can feel comfortable in being the mere catspaw of political jugglers, hucksters, penny-a-liners, hungry speculators, and disgraced officials? Yet it is from the statements of such men only that the Administration have acted, attaching the official seal to your movements. Now, I feel that when such treason is perpetrated unblushingly in open daylight against the liberties and most sacred rights of the citizens of this Territory, it is my duty, and the duty of every lover of his country and her sacred institutions, to resist it and maintain inviolate the Constitution of our common country.

Perhaps, Colonel, you may feel otherwise; education and associations have their influence; but I have yet to learn that United States officers are implicitly bound to obey the dictum of a despotic President in violating the most sacred constitutional rights of American citizens.

We have sought diligently for peace. We have sacrificed millions of dollars' worth of property to attain it, and wandered a thousand of miles from the confines of civilization, severing ourselves of Utah. I commend you to another your people and [illegible] the Territory, for it can be of no [illegible] to you to remain longer in Utah. [illegible] Government by its [illegible] you [illegible] will have plenty of time to settle [illegible] the reach of supplies of the East or to settle in Fort Hall. Should you conclude to comply with my [illegible] command, and need any assistance to get East, that assistance will be promptly and cheerfully extended. We do not wish to destroy the life of any human being, but, on the contrary, are ardently desirous to preserve the lives and liberty of all, so far as it may be in our power.

I should you or any of the officers with you [illegible] this city, unaccompanied by troops, as [illegible] WM. VOLNEY, with a view to personally learn the condition and feelings of this people, you are at liberty so to do, under my cheerfully pledged safeguard, and you will be escorted from our outposts to this city and back; and that, during your stay in our [illegible] you will receive all that courtesy and attention which [illegible] demands.

[illegible] you have supposed that many of the people [illegible] would use to you for protection on your arrival, and if there are any such persons they shall at once be conveyed to your camp in perfect safety so soon as such fact can be shown.

[illegible] you and your fellow-officers as well as [illegible] the same as I am with mine, and old [illegible] the work they are now engaged in [illegible] may indeed find it, you must know [illegible] would immediately revolt from [illegible] with so ungodly, illegal, unconstitutional [illegible] crusade against an innocent [illegible] and its chief, that rest upon [illegible] Government. [illegible] that your humane feelings will [illegible] you, in case there are any persons who wish [illegible] leave your camp for this city, to permit [illegible] to avail themselves of the protection and guidance of the escort now sent.

[illegible] that this communication will meet your [illegible] and hearty cooperation, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

BRIGHAM YOUNG,
Governor and Superintendent of Indian Affairs, U. T.

Col. E. B. ALEXANDER,
10th Inf., U. S. A., Camp Men's Fork.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 31, 1857.

GENERAL MARCY.—My Dear Sir: I embrace this the first opportunity of answering your communication of the 22d, embracing a letter from Mr. FULLER, of Newark, to you, an introductory letter to me, and also one from W. J. APPLEBY, to Governor YOUNG; which I received immediately on its receipt, I forwarded to the Governor; and here let me state, Sir, that I sincerely regret that circumstances now existing have prevented a personal interview.

I can readily believe your statement, that it is very far from your feelings, and most of the command [illegible] with you, to interfere with our social habits or religious views. One must naturally suppose that among gentlemen educated for the army alone, who have been occupied by the study of the art of war, whose pulses have throbbed with pleasure at the contemplation of the deeds of our venerated sires, whose minds have been elated by the heroic deeds of other nations, and who have lived almost exclusively to the declamations of patriots and heroes, there is not much time, and no inclination to listen to the low party bickerings of political demagogues, the interested twaddle of designing sycophants, or the threats and conclusions of contracted religious bigots. You are called to stand on elevated ground, representing and securing the interests of the whole great and mighty nation. That many of you, in this honorable, I am proud as an American citizen to acknowledge; but you must excuse me, my dear Sir, if I cannot concede with you that all your actions are so high-toned, disinterested, humane, and gentlemanly, as a knowledge of some of their antecedents expressly demonstrates. However, it is not with the personal character, the amiable qualities, high-toned feelings, or gentlemanly deportment of the officers in your expedition, that we at present have to do. The question which concerns us is one that is independent of your personal, generous, friendly and humane feeling, or any individual predilection of yours; it is one which involves the dearest rights of American citizens, strikes at the root of our social and political existence, if it does not threaten our entire annihilation from the earth. Excuse me, Sir, when I say you are merely the servants of a lamentably-corrupt Administration; that your primary law is obedience to orders; and that you came here with armed foreigners—with cannon, rifles, bayonets, and broadswords—expressly and for the openly-avowed purpose of "cutting out the loathsome ulcer from the body-politic." I am aware what our friend FULLER says in relation to this matter, and I entertain no doubt of his generous and humane feelings, nor do I of yours, Sir. But I do know that he is mistaken in relation to the rabid tone and false, furious attacks of a venal and corrupt press. I do know that they are merely the mouth-pieces, the tools, the barking dogs of a corrupt Administration. I do know that Mr. BUCHANAN was well apprised of the nature of the testimony adduced against us by Ex-Judge DRUMMOND and others; for, he was informed of it, to my knowledge, by a member of his own Cabinet. And I further know, from personal intercourse with members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, that there have been various plans concerted at "head-quarters" for some time past for the overthrow of this people. Captain, Mr. FULLER informs me that you are a politician. If so, you must know that, in the last Presidential campaign, the Republican Party had opposition to Slavery and Polygamy two of the principal planks in their platform. You may know, Sir, that Utah was picked out, and the only Territory excluded from a participation in the preemption rights to settlers. You may also be aware that bills were introduced into Congress for the prosecution of the Mormons; but other business was too pressing at that time. I might enumerate injuries by scores; and if these things are so, why is it not that Utah is so "knotty a question?"

If people were no more ready to interfere with us and our institutions than we are with them and theirs, these difficulties would vanish into thin air. Why, again I ask, could DRUMMOND and a host of other [illegible] paint their barefaced lies with such impunity, and have their infamous slanders swallowed with such gusto? Was it not that the administration and their satellites, having planned our destruction, were eager to catch at anything to render specious their contemplated acts of violence? Or, in plain terms, the Democrats advocated strongly popular sovereignty. The Republicans tell them that if they join in maintaining inviolable the domestic institutions of the South, they must also swallow polygamy. The Democrats thought this would not do, as it would interfere with the religious scruples of many of their supporters, and they looked about for some means to dispose of the knotty question. BUCHANAN, with DOUGLAS, CASS, THOMPSON, and others, after failing to devise legal measures, hit upon the expedient of a crusade against Utah, and thus thought to cut the Gordian knot of Mormonism by uniting the South in a war against a people, and killing a hundred birds with one stone. Thousands of American citizens, actuated by a pious, patriotic feeling of their constituents, take up arms at the calls of the Republicans, and are thus [illegible] launched, Captain, I have [illegible] of a pious Presbyterian doctrine that would [illegible] that Father to the All-wise Creator for the [illegible] of being damned. Now, as we are not [illegible] believe in the kind of self-ordained [illegible] from every excuse as for finding [illegible] to be summarily dealt with, no matter [illegible] an expedition might be [illegible] by many pious friends. We [illegible] the world to know that we [illegible] rights as [illegible] and that if others do not respect us, we [illegible] enough to respect [illegible]

[illegible] remark made by our [illegible] Mr. FULLER, to you, that he had rendered you certain services in the City of New-York, [illegible] he had no doubt that when you and command [illegible] you would report so favorably to [illegible] Mr. FULLER refers, were simply [illegible] of fact that had come within his own observation during a short sojourn at Salt Lake. This, of course, I could duly appreciate, for I always admire a man who dares tell the truth. But Captain, [illegible] you are humiliating to manhood and [illegible] honorable American citizens, when [illegible] have passed through and [illegible] as well as Mr. FULLER [illegible] positions, that perhaps [illegible] make his honest convictions; and, further, that Mr. FULLER, with his knowledge of human nature, should look upon you as a brave [illegible]

[illegible] possessing the moral courage and integrity [illegible] the truth in opposition to the fiends of falsehood that have deluged our nation. Surely, we have fallen on wonderful times, when a [illegible] is to be at so great a [illegible]

In regard to our religion, it is perhaps unnecessary to speak; you whatever other feelings may be about it, with us it is honestly a matter of conscience. This is a right guaranteed unto us by the Constitution of our country; yet it is on this ground, and this alone, that we have suffered a continued series of persecutions, and that this present crusade is set on foot against us. In regard to this people, I have traveled extensively in the United States and through Europe, yet I have never found so moral, chaste, and virtuous a people, nor do I expect to find them. And if let alone, they are the most patriotic, and appreciate more fully the blessings of religious, civil and political freedom than any other portion of the United States. They have, however, discovered the difference between a blind submission to the caprices of political demagogues, and obedience to the Constitution, laws, and institutions of the United States; nor can they, in the present instance, be hoodwinked by the cry of "treason." If it be treason to stand upon our constitutional rights; if it be treason to resist the unconstitutional acts of a gilded and corrupt administration, who, by a mercenary armed force, would seek to rob us of the rights of franchise, and our threats to observe their party, and seek to force upon us his corrupt tools, and violently invade the rights of American citizens; if it be treason to maintain inviolate our homes, our firesides, our wives, and our homes from the corrupting and withering blight of a debauched soldiery; if it be treason to keep inviolate the Constitution and institutions of the United States, when nearly all the States are seeking to trample them under their feet, then, indeed, are we guilty of treason. We have carefully considered all these matters, and are prepared to meet the terrible consequences we have been very politely informed will be the result of our acts. It is in vain to hide it from you that this people have suffered so much from every kind of official that they will endure it no longer. It is not with them an idle phantom, but a stern reality. It is not, as some suppose, the voice of Young's party only, but the universal, deep-seated feeling of the whole community. Their cry is, "Give us our constitutional rights; give us liberty or death." A strange cry, indeed, in our boasted model Republic, but a truth deeply and indelibly graven on the hearts of a hundred thousand American citizens by a series of twenty-seven years' unmitigated and unprovoked, yet unrequited wrongs. Having told you of this, you will not be surprised that when fifty have been called to assist in repelling our aggressors, a hundred have volunteered, and when a hundred have been called the number has been more than doubled; the only feeling is, "Don't let us be overlooked or forgotten." And here let me inform you that I have seen thousands of hands raised simultaneously voting to burn our property rather than let it fall into the hands of our enemies. They have been so frequently robbed and despoiled without redress that they have solemnly decreed that, if they cannot enjoy their own property, nobody else shall. You will see by this that it would be literally madness for your small force to attempt to come into the settlements. It would only be courting destruction. But, say you, have you counted the cost? have you considered the wealth and power of the United States, and the fearful odds against you? Yes; and here let me inform you that, if necessitated, we would as soon meet one hundred thousand as a thousand, and, if driven to the necessity, will burn every house, tree, shrub, rail, every patch of grass and stack of straw and hay, and flee to the mountains. You will then obtain a barren, desolate wilderness, but will not have conquered the people, and the same principle in regard to other property will be carried out. If this people have to burn their property to save it from the hands of legalized mobs, they will see to it that they shall be without fuel; they will haunt them by day and by night; such is in part our plan. The $300,000 worth of our property destroyed already in Green River county is only a faint sample of what will be done throughout the Territory. We have been thrice driven by tamely submitting to the authority of corrupt officials, and left our houses and homes for others to inhabit; but we have now determined that if we are again robbed of our possessions our enemies shall also feel how unpleasant it is to be houseless at least for once, and be permitted, as they have sought to do to us,

"To dig their own dark grave,
Creep into them and die."

You see we are not backward in showing our hands. Is it not strange to what lengths the human family may be goaded by a series of oppression? The Administration may yet find leisure to pause over the consequences of their acts, and it may yet become a question for them to solve, whether they have blood and treasure enough to crush out the sacred principles of liberty from the bosoms of 100,000 freemen, and make them bow in craven servility to the mendacious acts of of a perjured, degraded tyrant. You may have heard already that it is anything but pleasant for even a small army to contend with the chilling blasts of this inhospitable climate. How a large army would fare without resources you can picture to yourself. We have weighed these matters; it is for the Administration to post their own books. It may not be amiss, however, here to state that, if they continue to prosecute this inhuman, fratricidal war, and our Nero would light the fires, and, sitting complacently in the chair of State, laugh at burning Rome, there is a day even for Neroes. There are generally two sides to a question. As I have said before, we wish for peace, but we are determined on having it if we have to fight for it. We will not have officers forced upon us who are so degraded as to submit to be sustained by the bayonet point. We cannot be dragooned into servile obedience to any man.

These things settled, Captain, and all the like preliminaries of etiquette are easily arranged; and permit me here to state that no man would be more courteous and civil than Gov. YOUNG; nowhere could you find in your capacity of an officer of the United States a more generous and hearty welcome than at the hands of his Excellency. But when, instead of battling with the enemies of our country, you come (though probably reluctantly) to make war upon my family and friends, our civilities are naturally cooled, and we instinctively grasp the sword. Minié rifles, Colt's revolvers, sabres, and cannon may display very good workmanship and great artistic skill, but we very much object to having their temper and capabilities tried upon us. We may admire the capabilities and gentlemanly deportment, heroism, and patriotism of United States officers, but in an official capacity of enemies we would rather see their backs than their faces. The guillotine may be a very pretty instrument, and show great artistic skill, but I don't like to try my neck in it.

Now, Captain, notwithstanding all this, I shall be very happy to see you, if circumstances should so transpire as to make it convenient for you to come, and to extend to you the courtesies of our city, for I am sure you are not our personal enemy. I shall be happy to render you any information in my power in regard to your contemplated explorations.

I am heartily sorry that things are so unpleasant at the present time, and I cannot but realize the awkwardness of your position, and that of your compatriots; and let me here say that anything in my power compatible with the conduct of a gentleman you can command. If you have leisure, I should be most happy to hear from you. You will, I am sure, excuse me if I disclaim the prefix of Rev. to my name. Address JOHN TAYLOR, G. S. L. city.

I need not here assure you, that personally, there can be no feelings of enmity between us and your officers. We regard you as the agents of the Administration in the discharge of a probably unpleasant duty, and very likely ignorant of the ultimate designs of the Administration. As I left the East this Summer, you will excuse me when I say I am probably better posted in some of these matters than you are, having been one of a delegation from the citizens of this Territory to apply for admission into the Union. I can only regret that it is not our real enemies that are here instead of you. We do not wish to harm you, or any of the command to which you belong, and I can assure you that in any other capacity than the one you now occupy, you would be received as civilly and treated as courteously as in any other portion of our Union.

On my departure from the States, the fluctuating tide of popular opinion against us seemed to be on the wane. By this time there may be quite a reaction in the public mind. If so, it may probably affect materially the position of the Administration, and lead to more constitutional, pacific and humane measures. In such an event our relative positions would be materially changed, and, instead of meeting as enemies, we could meet as all Americans should—friends to each other, and united against our legitimate enemies only. Such an issue is devoutly to be desired, and I can assure you that no one would more appreciate so happy a result to our present awkward and unpleasant position than

YOURS, truly, JOHN TAYLOR.

HEAD-QUARTERS EASTERN EXPEDITION,
CAMP NEAR CACHE CAVE, Sunday, Oct. 4, 1857.

MAJOR JOSEPH TAYLOR: You will proceed with all possible dispatch, without injuring your animals, to the Oregon road, near the bend of Bear River, north by east of this place. Take close and correct observations of the country on your route. When you approach the road, send scouts ahead to ascertain if the invading troops have passed that way. If they have passed, take a concealed route and get ahead of them. Express to Col. EVANS, who is now on that road and in the vicinity of the troops, and effect a junction with him, so as to operate in concert. On ascertaining the locality or route of the troops, proceed at once to annoy them in every possible way. Use every exertion to stampede their animals and set fire to their trains. Burn the Mormon country before them and on their flanks. Keep them from sleeping by night surprises. Harass the rear by picketing or ambuscading pickets or fords where you can. Watch for opportunities to set fire to the grass on their windward, so as, if possible, to destroy their trains. Leave no grass before them that can be burned. Keep your men concealed as much as possible, and guard against surprises. Keep scouts out at all times, and communicate often with Col. EVANS, Major MCARTHUR and O. P. ROCKWELL, who are operating in the same way. Keep me advised daily of your movements, and every step the troops take, and in what direction. God bless you and give you success. Your brother in Christ,

DANIEL U. WELLS.

P. S.—If the troops have not passed, or have turned at this direction, follow in their rear, and continue to annoy them, burning any trains they may leave. Take no life, but destroy their trains, and stampede or drive away their animals at every opportunity.

D. U. W.

Notes on the Progress of Science.

DRESSING MILLSTONES.—The surfaces of all corn-grinding stones are provided with furrows or channels, so as to leave a large number of sharp edges to assist in the fine pulverization of the grain; and when these edges become dulled from use, it is necessary to renew them by regrooving. Until within a few years this labor was always done by hand, with mallet and chisel; but mechanism is now quite extensively employed for the purpose, one of the most recent and valuable inventions for accomplishing which, consists of a grooving apparatus to be attached by means of gearing to the spindle of one of the stones, in such a manner that when the device is made to move it will travel round concentrically, and cut concentric grooves upon the stones, as may be desired.

PECULIAR MODE OF WORKING STEAM.—An arrangement of cylinder and piston has been devised as will cause the elastic force of the steam to operate twice by being admitted first at high pressure on one side of the piston, and afterwards on the opposite one, which is of a much larger area, where its expansion is completed before being finally condensed or discharged into the atmosphere. The trunk is made of such convenient size as to slide inside a suitable guide or chamber, in the end of the cylinder, in such a manner that the steam may act on the effective area simultaneously with the area remaining of that side the piston—being thus guided and supported on both sides against the oblique pressure of the connecting rod, while the total surface of one of its sides is not lessened, upon which the steam acts on its second entrance into the cylinder. This is accomplished by constructing the cross-sectional area of the smaller ram of a different form to that of the closed chamber in which it slides, and by which it is guided, so as to allow the steam to pass freely from the cylinder into the vacant space between the two. The sides of the chamber, or hollow guide, can also be made adjustible so as to compensate for the wear, in lieu of the piston rubbing against the actual sides themselves.

MANUFACTURE OF OPTICAL GLASS.—The manufacture of Optical glass is one which requires to be conducted with very peculiar care. As is well known, it is of two different kinds, namely: crown glass and flint glass. The latter contains a considerable proportion of lead, in order to give it an increased dispersive power upon the rays of light, in proportion to its mean refractive power. Optical crown glass should be perfectly limpid, and have so little color that a pretty thick piece of it may give no appreciable tinge to the rays of light. It should be exempt from stric or veins, as well as air-bubbles, and have not the slightest degree of milkiness. It should moreover preserve these qualities when worked in considerable quantities. Potash is preferable to soda for making Optical crown glass, because the latter alkali is apt to make a glass which devitrifies and becomes opalescent, by long exposure to heat in the annealing process. The English crown glass has long enjoyed a high celebrity, but scarcely anything can exceed the beauty and perfectness of some specimens of our own American manufacture.

PROTECTION AGAINST SHOT AND OTHER PROJECTILES.—An improved means of protecting floating batteries, ships, &c., from shell, shot or other projectiles, has been invented, and which consists in covering the exposed surface of such constructions by a combination of plates or sheets of iron, arranged one above the other, so as to offer the several separate thicknesses of metal to resist the concussion of any projectile. The inventor has found by experiment that if, instead of employing very thick and heavy plates of metal to resist shot and shell, the same quantity of metal be distributed differently, that is, in the form of different sheets of moderate thickness placed one over the other, a much more effectual resistance will be obtained. He has, therefore, based his present invention upon this discovery, and the plan proposed to be adopted for carrying it into effect consists in employing a series of thin metallic plates, either of iron or amalgamted steel, arranged one over the other, so that they may either be close to or separated from each other by the plates being hollowed or curved, or by the interposing of any soft substance, such as cork, felt, caoutchouc, &c., so as to present a surface not solid, but hollow and elastic.

ROTARY MOTION ON A NEW PRINCIPLE.—A new and ingenious system of rotary motion for all kinds of vehicles is proposed by M. LANG, a Parisian inventor. Instead of supporting the frame or body of the vehicle upon the axle, or in the centre of the wheel, as is generally done, M. LANG causes it, by a peculiar arrangement, to rest upon an exterior part of the nave of the wheel, between the spokes and the frame or body of the vehicle. To effect this object more readily it is desirable to make the naves or wheels larger and stronger than usual,—furnishing them also with a strong cylindrical hoop or band of iron, plain, toothed or notched, and provided with a flange or projection at each end. The frame or body of the vehicle is furnished underneath on both sides with a strong box or bracket of iron, into which is fitted a roller or pinion—plain, toothed or notched, corresponding with the hoop or band on the nave, and having a strong spindle of hardened steel affixed to or passing through its centre, so as to constitute an axis on which the roller or pinion can rotate freely within the box or bracket.

SAFETY-VALVE AND SIGNAL.—One of the most practicable arrangements of the valve for the boilers of steam engines, &c., is that described in the London Mining Journal, and which not only performs the functions of an ordinary safety-valve, but gives notice, by a loud signal, whenever the level of the water in the boiler deviates from its proper limit, or in case of the safety-valve becoming inoperative, by adhesion or any other cause. It consists of a standard, which is tubular at the lower part; on the top of this is a pulley, over which works a chain, connected at one end to a float in the boiler, while to the other hangs a balance-weight. From the bottom of the standard projects an elbow-pipe, on the top of which is a chamber, containing the safety-valve, and connected with a powerful steam whistle. The valve-rod is acted on by a weighted lever, the fulcrum of which is one side, and also by another acting in an opposite direction. The ends of these levers are elbowed, and the rod from the float within the boiler passes through them, having a tappet on it midway between them, which, being either raised or depressed by any fluctuation of water in the boiler, or in case of the float becoming detached, acts against one of the lever ends.

METAL-WORK, PAST AND PRESENT.—Works executed in metal should have a distinctive character about them, differing in treatment from those employed when the work is executed in other materials, such as wood, glass or stone. In metal-work the ductility and tenacity of some of the metals—the value, color and power of reflecting light in others, are elements which ought to be considered in the design and execution. Nothing is more common at the present day than to see the conditions reversed, that is, to see imitations in cast-iron of what should be wrought, a form copied in the most fragile of metals which was originally produced in the most ductile,—or attempts made to substitute, by means of the moulder's art, the triumphs of the hammerman's skill. In works of this class, in the ancient and middle ages, the conditions were rarely reversed. Fitness in material and in purpose was observed, and ornamentation was always subordinate to the purpose. Thus, in the preparation of the metal-work for the ark in the tabernacle, and for Solomon's temple, those [illegible] exposed to much wear and tear, which were required to sustain great weights were of [illegible] and substantial make, while those for a merely ornamental purpose were slight. In an instance of the success to which the art of casting in it that early period was carried, it has been estimated by competent judges that the weight of one of the castings of a pillar in the temple must have been equal to nearly twenty tons.

ARTIFICIAL FIRE-CLAY.—Common clay is very fusible; this is owing to the presence of lime, iron and magnesia in it. By removing these substances it can be employed for making very refractory vessels, such as crucibles, to withstand a very high degree of heat. The way to do this is to steep the clay for some hours—from six to twenty-four, in dilute muriatic acid, according to the quantity of these substances in it; then washing it with water, and drying it afterwards. The muriatic acid takes up and dissolves the substances named, which are removed with the washing.

CAST-IRON TURNINGS.—It is common to consider the fine turnings, clippings and filings of iron nearly or quite useless, on account of their disposition to blow up the chimney, or stick and clog the draught, on attempting to remelt them; but methods are now employed which render it perfectly practicable to remelt such particles, even if there are considerable quantities of wrought iron and dirt intermingled. One of these methods consists in providing a lot of cheap hollow castings, of any convenient form, and, filling them with the fine particles, and placing them in the furnace, where the whole melts together. Another method consists in merely piling the fine particles in a compact mass, as near as possible to the centre of each charge, so that the draught may rise freely through the coal around it. In this connection may be noticed the prejudice entertained by many against the use of scrap-iron for the construction of axles, shafts, &c. Scrap-iron has been generally well worked over, and is in that respect superior to that just from the puddling furnace, but the unequal character of the fragments, causing some to burn before others are soft enough to weld, induces, in many cases, the most fatal accidents by failure, where it could not, by any care, have been anticipated.

Gen. Walker's Letters to Commodore Paulding.

The following are the letters from Gen. WALKER to Commodore PAULDING, to which allusion has been already made:

HEAD-QUARTERS ARMY OF NICARAGUA,
PUNTA ARENAS, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that I landed at this port on Wednesday last from the steamer Fashion, bearing the United States flag and sailing from the port of Mobile, Alabama. Accompanying me were a number of officers belonging to the Nicaraguan service, and some emigrants from the United States who desired to become naturalized citizens of this Republic. The steamer was regularly cleared at Mobile for the port of San Juan de Nicaragua, and it was acknowledged that her voyage was a legal one. I need not add that the President and Government of the United States were fully advised of my intention to return to Nicaragua.

We had scarcely, however, disembarked, when the commander of the United States sloop Saratoga sent a Lieutenant to inform me I must evacuate certain property now held by one JOSEPH N. SCOTT, as the pretended agent of the Nicaragua Transportation Co. The Fashion, too, had hauled alongside the schooner Chase, formerly sailed under the United States flag, but now without papers, as she was transferred to me by act before the Commercial Agent of the United States; nevertheless, the captain of the Fashion was ordered to haul away from the Chase, and not to leave any stores for me from the ship until I had complied with the order to evacuate the buildings now held by SCOTT. I was informed by the commander of the Saratoga that these orders were given because Mr. SCOTT claimed protection for the property as being American. In all this Commander CHATARD acted ex parte, receiving SCOTT'S statements as true, and announcing a decision on the matter without hearing what I had to say.

Now, I beg leave to inform you that Mr. SCOTT holds all the property on the Point from the Government of Nicaragua, and under an order from me as President of the Republic. Furthermore, he holds the schooner Chase as my trustee, and he is now protected in fraudulently withholding her from me by an officer of the United States Navy. SCOTT also holds other property, consisting of military and other stores, belonging to this Government, and these he wrongfully and illegally retains by the aid of the guns of the Saratoga.

Notwithstanding the injustice of the Commander, I was obliged to yield to the orders of the Saratoga. But this did not relieve me from what I cannot but style the impertinence of Commander CHATARD. Without alleging that there had been any interference on my part with American property, he sent a Lieutenant to inform me that if I molested such property he would regard my force as hostile, and prevent it by shot and shell from leaving the Point.

Nor did this end the injustice of Commander CHATARD. This morning I received a note, under seal of H. B. M. Consul-General for Mosquito, couched in the following terms:

UNITED STATES SHIP SARATOGA,
OFF GREYTOWN, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

SIR: I have been informed through Mr. SHERR, H. B. Majesty's Consul, that you meditate seizing the English mail from Costa Rica, with American, English, and letters of merchants of other nations, besides there may be money. Now I warn you not to touch it, and to allow it to come safely at hand here. If you do not I will proceed against you without hesitation, in the manner I sent you word the other day. In a few days the American, as well as English Commodores will be here, and all your acts of violence will then be more particularly noticed.

Yours respectfully,
FRED'K CHATARD, Commander.

I have the honor to report these facts to you, and to request that you will cause Commander CHATARD to cease this unjust and illegal conduct. As a native of the United States, engaged in what your Government admits to be a lawful undertaking, and awaiting rights which cannot but commend themselves to the sense of justice of all civilized nations, I claim as my due that you shall not permit the sovereignty of Nicaragua to be violated by the Commander of the Saratoga, for the purpose of gratifying his opinions or his prejudices. With full confidence, I ask from your hands that justice which it is the proud boast of your Government to award to all.

I have the honor to be your obd't serv't,
WM. WALKER,
Commander-in-Chief Army of Nicaragua.
Commodore H. PAULDING, United States Navy.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NICARAGUA,
PUNTA ARENAS, Wednesday, Dec. 2, 1857.

SIR: Since addressing you on the 30th ult., other events have transpired to which I am constrained to call your attention.

On the forenoon of the 30th a brig, bearing Sardinian colors and having the Nicaraguan flag at the fore, entered this harbor. Soon after she rounded the Point a number of armed boats pulled off from the Saratoga towards the brig, and an officer boarded her. Thus, you perceive, the Saratoga attempts to maintain the police of this port, in derogation of the territorial rights of Nicaragua, treating vessels in our harbor precisely as if they were on the high seas. I cannot think that your Government authorizes such palpable wrong and injustice.

The same day several officers from the Saratoga, not in uniform, came into my camp, regardless of the hall of the sentinel and without permission from the officer of the day. They were informed that, should they do so again, the sentry would be instructed to fire on them. On the following morning I was surprised to receive in the hand of Lieutenant CILLEY the following communication:

UNITED STATES SHIP SARATOGA,
SAN JUAN DEL NORTE, Tuesday, Dec. 1, 1857.

SIR: Lieutenant CILLEY, the bearer of this, is one of the officers to whom you offered yesterday the gross indignity of threatening to shoot them. Now, such an insult to officers of the United States Navy is a national offence. You certainly act with very little policy, for, surely, if you were to dare to touch one of my officers I would feel justified to retaliate in the extreme, and would not hesitate to do so. I will lay the matter before the Commodore when he arrives, and no doubt he will feel the insult more deeply than myself. I received your dispatch and will forward it to him. Respectfully,

FRED. CHATARD, Commander.

Gen. WM. WALKER.

A few hours after this note was sent, several boats filled with armed men and with a boat howitzer in one of them, were seen pulling from the Saratoga to the upper portion of the Point, where a company of my men were quartered. The United States officer in charge [illegible] immediately began without [illegible] his men in firing, whilst the [illegible] officer deployed his company [illegible] where I saw any incroachment [illegible] Under such circumstances a collision between the two forces seeming from the conduct of the commander of the Saratoga that he was intently seeking to produce a collision, I deemed it prudent to order the company near where his boats landed into my main camp. I can assure you it is only by constant watchfulness and caution on my part that an actual conflict has been prevented.

Although I had treated the previous notes of Commander CHATARD with the contempt they merited, by refusing to answer them, he sent me this morning, by the hands of an officer, another communication, of which the following is a copy:

UNITED STATES SHIP SARATOGA, Dec. 2, 1857.

SIR: As I am entirely opposed to harming any one unless I have a fair fill right and very good reasons to do so, I wish to notify you in time that your men on the Point are in the way of any shot I may have to fire to bring vessels to; for I am determined to bring all vessels to, so that I may fully inquire into their character. Of course, I do not admit your claim to that soil, nor can you yourself in earnest imagine that any nation in the civilized world can do so either. Respectfully,

FREDK. CHATARD, Commander.

Gen. WM. WALKER.

You will see that this note reasserts the right of a United States vessel to maintain the police of this port. The Commander, too, after having admitted my claim to exercise the functions of Government, by accusing me of offering an indignity to the United States, now denies our right to the soil of Nicaragua. But it is useless to call your attention to the childish follies of these notes, as they are apparent to the most casual observer. Were they not signed by a United States officer they should not be dignified by notice on my part.

With consideration, I have the honor to remain your obedient servant, WM. WALKER,
Commander-in-Chief Army of Nicaragua.
Commodore H. PAULDING, United States Navy.

Central American Affairs—The Walker Expedition.

From the Courier and Enquirer.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Dec. 27.

WALKER is recognized as only the accidental leader of the anti-Nicaraguan movement. The distinguished man who has conceived the late Expedition was dispatched here in confidence in his capacity. They say he has perseverance, and that sort of romantic attractiveness of character which enables him to collect a company of adventurers and make a sudden descent, but he is wanting in the qualities requisite for the government of an army and the conduct of a campaign. The flight of the Fashion was precipitated by his fear that he would be superseded in the command by the General Committee which furnished the means and assumed the right to control the movement.

I cannot learn that there has been an intention to appoint General HERNSDEN to the command. He has totally failed to bring up the Northern contingent which he promised. He is a good officer in the field, but others are relied upon to supply men and means. General HERNSDEN is at present doing the diplomatic work of the expedition, and is laboring to mitigate the hostility of the foreign legation here, by representing that the Americanization of Central America will be for the advantage of all European Governments which are troubled with a redundant population. Central America will invite peaceful settlers from all countries, and will supply to the now suffering poorer classes of Europe cotton and sugar at cheap rates. What impression these arguments have made on the parties to whom addressed, I have not yet learned; but it is conjectured that while they are admitted to have some force by the Ministers from Russia, France, Holland and the German powers, they are wholly dissented from by those of England and Spain.

Mr. BUCHANAN and Mr. APPLETON are anxious to procure the abrogation of the Clayton and Bulwer Treaty, because it conflicts with a line of policy which has an important bearing on the domestic quarrel concerning Kansas. Lord NAPIER and Sir G. CUMMING denote. They say a bargain is a bargain. They consider that the Convention of 1850 obliges the American Government as well to prevent filibustering forays for the occupation of Central America, as to refrain from the occupation of it by an army acting under its orders.

Mr. BUCHANAN declares his opinion in the Message, that these illicit armed expeditions prevent the migration and settlement of peaceful American citizens, who would engage in the pursuits of agriculture, manufactures and trade, and thus prepare the country for admission into our Union as States. This is the opinion of the ablest surviving member of General PIERCE'S Cabinet, General CUSHING. That eminent man consistently maintained in the late Administration the opinions of a progressive, yet conservative, Northern statesman on this question. He said, let the Americanization of Central America be effected, in part, at least, by the Northern hand and the Northern mind; let the moral power of industry and intellect assert their superiority over the inert masses of mixed Spanish and Indian blood. Though he opposed the reception of Padre Vigil in May, 1856, he proceeded upon these views in framing the very lucid and able Message to the Senate announcing the recognition of that Minister. General CUSHING wrote the Message, Governor MARCY having declined to prepare it. This policy is the exact opposite of that which would seize the country with the red hand. Such is now the actual position of the Central American question.

Political Movements—Preconitory Symptoms of the Presidential Election—The Mormon Matter.

From the Courier and Enquirer.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 28.

An agreeable social and political banquet was given by FRANCIS P. BLAIR, at his residence of Silver Spring, on Friday last, to Hon. N. P. BANKS, President KING, Judge TRUMBULL, Senator DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, F. P. BLAIR, Jr., and many other prominent members of the Republican Party in Congress. Important political measures are often conceived and arranged at these festive meetings. It was at Silver Spring, in the Winter and Spring of 1856, that the nomination of Col. FREMONT was settled. Parties are forming their plans already for 1860, which is but two years distant. The preliminary movements of the Republicans are of most public interest, because they are the party which will succeed in 1860. Col. BENTON says that the chasm in the Democratic Party cannot possibly be closed or bridged, and that the Republicans can only defeat themselves by gross mistakes. The Republican candidate for 1860 will be taken from the circle of these names: Mr. SEWARD, Col. FREMONT, Governor BANKS, Governor CHASE, Governor BISSELL.

Senator DOUGLAS or Governor WALKER will probably be the candidate of the Barnburners or Free-Soil Democracy, and President BUCHANAN will necessarily be renominated by the Administration party. This latter result will be brought about by the smothered rivalry of Messrs. WISE and HUNTER, and the struggles for ascendancy between JEFFERSON DAVIS and ROBERT TOOMBS.

The adoption of Mr. WALKER'S resolution on Wednesday last, looking to the expulsion of the delegate from Utah, Dr. BERNHISEL, was very inconsiderate. Utah has not been officially declared in rebellion, but on the contrary, has been unofficially declared not in rebellion. Now, if the Territory were in that condition, is there any evidence that Dr. BERNHISEL is not politically loyal and sound? Socially he sympathizes with his people, and is in favor of the many wife system. His conduct here is in all respects exemplary. Public opinion would perhaps have tolerated the presence here in an unobtrusive way, of the senior Mrs. BERNHISEL, but the Dr. has not brought her. The number of those who grace the delegate's establishment at home is said to be thirteen. It is a part of the Mormon system that when an Elder in the church is absent on ecclesiastical service his wives pass under the protection of the Pontiff. BRIGHAM YOUNG is now responsible for the Madames BERNHISEL.

The delegate is one of the most quiet and pleasant gentlemen in the House. In deportment, tone of voice, person and countenance, he bears a striking resemblance to ROBERT J. WALKER. He is a native of Pennsylvania. He looked haggard and worn after his long journey over the plains on his first arrival, but has since recruited. Although he has been in the House six years, I recollect hearing him speak but once, and that was to protest against any discussion of the social and domestic institutions of Utah. His forte is facturity. In private conversation he is fluent and agreeable. He is an industrious man of business, and attends faithfully to the interests of his constituents.

He is rather short of stature. His head is nearly bald, but iron-gray locks project diagonally from the skull near the ears upward and forward, resembling the horns with which the old masters used to embellish their portraits of Satan, who was and is noted as a long-headed politician.

Douglas in the Senate.

From the Albany Evening Journal.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 22, 1857.

The Senate chamber was again the centre of attraction to-day. Mr. STUART, of Michigan, who had the floor, surrendered it to Mr. FESSENDEN, who proceeded to an attack upon DOUGLAS. Douglas is small, lithely built, with a ready command of language and an extensive, if not

It is understood to be the intention of General Quitman to introduce in the House a bill for the repeal or modification of the Neutrality Laws.

Obituary.

Mr. Samuel King, of Rising Sun, Indiana, died very suddenly on Tuesday. He became involved in financial difficulties, and his creditors in New-York seized with large claims and closed his store. On Thursday he roused his children across the creek to accompany and returning, remarked to a neighbor that it was the last time he should cross. He told his wife that he should not live, and visited to tell her all about his business. He shortly after laid down and died from no apparent cause but deep grief and mortification.

M. de Boucherville, Member of the Legislative Council of Canada, died at his residence in Boucherville, last week, aged 78. He took a prominent part in the war of 1812, in defence of the Province.

Miscellaneous Items.

Colonel Jesse Williams, U. S. Deputy Marshal at Boston, died in Boston a week or two since, with the exception of Governor Matteson of Massachusetts, the Governor of Illinois, Judge Frank Hughes, of East Tennessee, and Thorburn, who was Superintendent of the Topographical Department of the Surveying Expedition, under charge of Lieut. Edward F. Beale. The latter arrived at Los Angeles, California, on the 6th of November.

The Albion says: "Many of our readers will be glad to learn that our late much-respected Consul, Mr. Barclay, returned to this country in the Canada, looking, we are glad to say, in excellent health and spirits; and has retired from the employ of the Foreign Office, on a pension well earned by his long and faithful services."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Commodore PAULDING has made to the Government at Washington a clear statement of the circumstances under which he effected the arrest of Gen. WALKER, and of the reasons which induced him to take the decisive and important step upon his own responsibility. Our advices from Washington indicate that, although this action is repudiated and disavowed by the Government, it may not be treated as a positive infraction of the law on the part of the Commodore. WALKER presented himself at the Department of State in custody of Martin Horsman, and was informed by the Secretary that the Government did not regard him as a prisoner, and that it could not detain him. It was for the Judiciary to commence proceedings against him for any alleged violation of the laws of the country. WALKER was therefore discharged.

The news of the arrest of General WALKER has caused the greatest excitement in New-Orleans, and an indignation meeting is called for to-day. Immediate steps will probably be taken for the reinforcement of Colonel ANDERSON at Fort Castillo.

Advices from Leavenworth, Kansas, to the 25th, give the vote of that city as 238 for Slavery, and 9 against it. Many Missourians are stated to have been present, some of whom voted, after swearing that they were inhabitants of the Territory. Several of them had been arrested, but Judge LECOMPTE had released them by writs of habeas corpus. A rumor prevailed that Secretary DENVER had ordered the arrest of the notorious Gen. JIM LANE.

We find in the Washington Union the dispatches from Col. JOHNSTON, commanding the Utah Expedition, together with the letters from BRIGHAM YOUNG and JOHN TAYLOR, extracts of which were telegraphed to us and published in yesterday's TIMES. The importance of the documents warrants their publication in full this morning. Young's letter, it will be seen, display a manifest hostility and settled determination to resist by force, and to the utmost of his power, the advance of United States troops into Utah.

The navigation of the Hudson may be considered closed for the season. The weather along the river has been very cold during the last few days, and there are large quantities of floating ice between Fishkill and Albany. Snow fell there to the depth of three or four inches yesterday, and sleighing is good. The steamboat New-World cleared from this City at her usual time on Monday night, for Albany, loaded with freight and passengers, but could proceed no further than Coeymans, owing to the thickness of the ice. She got back yesterday morning for Poughkeepsie, [illegible] at 7 o'clock, and landed her passengers in time to take the express train over the Hudson River Railroad for Albany.

The Board of Aldermen, last evening, adopted the report of the Committee in favor of disposing of the lower part of the City Hall Park, for a site for a Post-Office. They, also, voted the use of the Governor's Room to the Mayor elect, to receive the visitors on New-Year's day. The Tax Levy was finally passed up, and several additions made, and it was then laid over.

By the Board of Councilmen last evening, the bill to provide for the payment of the landlord of Tammany Hall for refreshments, which had been taken and earnestly argued, was lost for want of a constitutional vote. Sixty-six names were put upon the list as Commissioners of Deeds, in place of others rejected. The rest of the sitting was occupied with matters of no great interest, and the Board adjourned at the usual hour until the following day.

The Board of Commissioners of the Central Park held a special meeting yesterday afternoon. The withdrawal of $16,000 for the payment of laborers, was authorized, and a variety of routine business transacted.

In the Supreme Court yesterday, Judge DAVIES referred back the report to widen Reade-street, on the ground that proper notice of the application to confirm the report had not been published. Sixty days' notice must be given, and the report will then be again presented. An injunction was granted by Judge DAVIES, restraining the Mayor, &c., from granting a lease of the slip between piers 25 and 26, East River, for a ferry to Williamsburg. The application was made by the Williamsburg Ferry Company.

The Coroner's investigation took place yesterday in the case of JACOB REICHSHEIMER, the German who was killed on Sunday afternoon at the house No. 67 Cannon-street. A verdict was given by the Jury against HENRY SEEMER and wife, the parties arrested on charge of the homicide. SEEMER gave bail for his appearance for trial, and his wife was locked up.

The annual election of Managers of the New-York Institution for the Blind, for the ensuing year, took place yesterday. The following gentlemen were chosen: Silas Brown, George F. Allen, Isaac Wood, M. D., Robert Gracie, Robert J. Murray, Robert L. Cozzens, John P. Crosby, Augustus Schell, George F. Jones, John G. Adams, M. D., Thomas N. Cole, Edward L. Beadle, M. D., Edward Wood, Alfred W. Craven, William Curtis Noyes, William Dunnet, James Warren, Anson G. Phelps, George F. Comstock, M. D.

An address was delivered before the eleventh annual convention of the Delta Psi Fraternity, at Mozart Hall last evening, by CHARLES H. MORRIS, Esq.

The General Markets, yesterday, were dull and heavy. The stormy weather was against a vigorous business. Flour arrived less freely—yet it was in stock request at reduced prices for low and medium brands. The stock of all kinds of flour in this City and vicinity is estimated at about 870,000 bbls. Wheat and Corn were quiet. Prices varied very slightly. Northern Rye brought only 75c. per bushel, a decline of 1c. ⅌ bushel since Monday. Provisions were less active, and buyers of pork hams had any existing advantage. Groceries were moderately inquired for at former prices. Cotton was depressed and nominal in value. Freights exhibited no really new feature.

THE ARMY OF WALKER.—The Journal of Commerce justifies Commodore PAULDING in his seizure of WALKER, and says:

"It is certain that, had Commodore PAULDING refused or hesitated to act as he did, the commander of the British squadron at Greytown would have taken the matter, and used forcible means, if necessary, to compel WALKER to surrender and quit the territory of Nicaragua. In this emergency, we think that the Commodore exercised a wise discretion in taking the step he did, even at the risk of technically invading the sovereignty of Nicaragua. It is far better that he should have made the filibuster prisoner, than that a British officer should have done so, and that whatever steps were to be taken on this Continent to preserve peace and order, and prevent outrage, should be taken by American officers, under the American flag.

"If these American officers could be sustained in their action by the American Government, the Journal's view of the case is unquestionably correct. It would certainly be [illegible] for us to keep the peace and enforce [illegible] in a region of the earth over which we claim exclusive supervision.—[illegible] to other powers. But if, on second thought, our officers should be court-martialed and cashiered for having sent WALKER home, then we shall be inclined to wish that the whole matter had been left to the action of the British squadron. If they had arrested WALKER, it is not at all likely that their acts would have been disavowed by their own Government,—at least not in advance of complaint on the part of the country whose sovereignty was violated.

The Nicaragua Question.

The people of Nicaragua are very much to be pitied. They occupy a position on the world's surface which exposes them to the interference of all the world with their domestic affairs, while it commands for them no sincere interest and no unalloyed alliance in any quarter whatsoever.

Under the dominion of Spain they were carefully secluded from all communication with the bulk of mankind, and were left to increase and multiply as best they might, to cultivate their plantations of indigo and sugar, of coffee and cotton, to watch over their flocks and herds, to eat and drink, grow old and die, with but one political duty imposed on them, to pay their taxes to the crown, and but one political obligation, to be loyal to their lords and abstain from wars and fightings. Swept away in the great revolutionary drift of the eighteenth century from their allegiance to Castile and Leon, they suddenly found themselves invested with all the dangerous responsibilities of liberty and independence. They discharged the novel functions to which they were thus peremptorily called as well as was to be expected, till the gold discoveries of California and Australia began to pour the tide of European and American commerce through their territory, and brought them into the most complicated and exciting relations with the great maritime powers of the earth, and especially with the United States, their near neighbors. From that hour they have known no peace. The invasion of their borders by an adventurer from California, and all the train of mischiefs and disorders which followed that invasion, might well have sufficed to bring a stronger and more healthy organization to the very verge of dissolution.

But WILLIAM WALKER has by no means monopolized the Mephistophelian office of misleading, disturbing, harrassing and confounding this unhappy people. In fact, a ridiculously-exaggerated estimate has been put upon the influence of that headlong personage in the affairs of Nicaragua. Had nobody more important than the "Hero of Granada" been concerned in the forays, correrias, expulsions, discussions, expeditions, and confusions, which have made up the history of Central America for the last three years, the public of the United States, and of the world, would have been long ago delivered from the necessity of reading or thinking about the subject; and the "gray-eyed man of destiny" would have been long ago summarily dismissed to a place beside the Count de RAGNAR-ET-BOULBON and others of that class of adventurers, accurately defined by the New American Cyclopædia as "persons who lack the necessary discipline and balance of mind to submit themselves to the laws of society, while at the same time they are devoured by the ambition of distinguishing themselves, of making a fortune or a sensation."

But the domain of Nicaragua is a capital field of speculation for men of means and of commercial ambition, and as such it has been sedulously worked by rival operators, of whom WILLIAM WALKER and his men have been by turns the tools and the victims. And the actual complication of the diplomatic relations of England and the United States in regard to Nicaragua, will be solved not by any disposition that may be made of the ejected "Ex-President" and his band, but by the triumph in the Nicaraguan councils of one or another of the commercial interests now contending at the capital of the distracted State. While the "victim" of Commodore PAULDING is busily befogging the public mind of the United States with disquisitions on the law of nations and the Americanization of Nicaragua, the representatives of one and another New-York Transit Company are settling the real questions at issue, a thousand miles away. The recognition by President BUCHANAN, of the Martinez Government in Nicaragua, and the transaction of a treaty with its Envoy, Señor YRISSARI, (against which treaty it is reported that the English Government has protested as an infraction of our national good faith,) were brought about by the influence of one New-York Company, for the purpose of consolidating its arrangements with the Martinez Government; and the same influence will of course be exerted to defeat the hopes and aspirations of WALKER, who stands committed to the fortunes of a hostile enterprise. But it is by no means certain that the Martinez Government itself will not reject this very treaty negotiated by its own emissary. For, immediately upon the conclusion of the Yrisarri negotiations, a mysterious messenger from Nicaragua reached this country, charged to interrupt these negotiations; and this messenger, finding himself just "too late for the fray" at Washington, instantly returned to Nicaragua for the purpose of preventing the ratification of the treaty of which he had failed to arrest the conclusion.

Thus, then, the matter stands:

A treaty with Nicaragua has been negotiated, which, in terms, at least, appears not only to conflict with our obligations to England, but to make it impossible for Mr. BUCHANAN to show any countenance or favor whatever to WILLIAM WALKER and his designs. This Treaty is now under consideration by the Nicaraguan authorities, and we may be sure that no efforts will be spared by certain parties in New-York to defeat its ratification. If these efforts should be successful, and the Yrisarri Treaty should be returned unaccepted, the field will be cleared for a fair and honorable settlement by Great Britain and the United States of the whole Transit question on terms of equal justice to all parties concerned. If, on the other hand, the Yrisarri Treaty should be accepted by Nicaragua, then it has still to be discussed by the Senate of the United States, and may be rejected by that body either by tacit agreement with the President or otherwise.

Of course, if the Yrisarri Treaty should be finally ratified and carried into effect, we may count upon seeing the Walker machinery once more set in motion from New-York, to upset the Martinez Government. If, then, President BUCHANAN desire to clear himself and his Administration of all suspicion of complicity in the schemes of the commercial cliques between whom the destinies of Nicaragua are undergoing so severe a shuffling, he has plainly but one course to pursue with regard to the puppet WALKER. Whatever Mr. BUCHANAN may know in private of the relations of that agent with his "owners," in his public capacity the President can see in WILLIAM WALKER simply a notorious lawbreaker, jeopardizing the lives of American citizens and the honor of the American name, in enterprises which the President has justly denounced as involving the character of the United States in "acts of robbery and murder." If technical difficulties stand in the way of an immediate prosecution and punishment of the criminal, there is nothing to prevent such action as shall make the repetition of his crimes impossible. The respectable sentiment of the country has been fully aroused on this matter; and nothing short of the most decisive measures can safely be taken in dealing with an individual who has openly insulted the flag and the uniform of the United States in the prosecution of his contemptible schemes of personal advantage and pecuniary profit.

The Abolition of the East India Company.

That something is to be done with the East India Company seems to be tolerably certain. Just what that something may eventually turn out to be, nobody in England has yet ventured distinctly to foretell, and the language of the Royal speech on this head is more than usually vague and insignificant. But the English public, and in a less degree the public of Christendom, have already shown an unmistakable satisfaction with the prospect of a final term to the domination under which the work of modernizing the Hindoo mind, and of establishing modern order in the relations, political and social, of the Hindoo races, has made such very questionable progress. For the world must hold somebody accountable for the unexampled and unexplained explosion of the Bengal army; and, while old Anglo-Indians still stand aghast at the spectacle, and powerless to guide the Government in exploring its origin, mankind in general, impatient of so horrible a mystery, have thrown the responsibility upon the men and the system of the East India Company.

This is perfectly natural, but it is not, therefore, necessarily just.

The East India Company cannot be snuffed out like a candle. It is less a Company than a Dynasty. Its traditions make up a great history of mighty wars, of imperial conquests, of enterprises conceived in the spirit of a Cæsar and executed with a Cæsar's genius. The demolition of this fabric of a hundred years is not a work to be approached with jaunty self-confidence by men who have neither shared in its folly nor can comprehend its innumerable difficulties. Wisely to criticise the past administration of India, and sagaciously to modify the actual constitution of authority in Hindostan will call upon the English Parliament for all its resources of patriotism and of statesmanship. Bad as the "Double Government" may be, who shall say upon which limb of that composite organ the most serious blame ought to rest, whether upon the Cabinet's Board of Control, or the Company's Court of Directors? And what arguments does the Past offer in favor of submitting India to a purely colonial rule? The Ministers of the British Crown contrived to lose for England the empire of the Western World, an empire bound to the metropolis by all the ties of common blood and of a common speech. In more recent times the same Ministers have endangered more than once the connection of England with her English dependencies of Australia and Canada, and have exasperated scores of smaller colonies to the extreme limits of loyal endurance by their folly, their obstinacy, and their ignorant pride. The character of the Colonial Office has, we know, been seriously modified for the better within the last few years; and if India were popular with English settlers, it is very possible that the hold of England upon that country might defy all the meddling of Parliaments, and all the blundering of Secretaries. But the population of Hindostan are still a mystery even to those of their foreign rulers who know them best. That part of Hindoo life, its domestic side, in which its real springs of action lie, up to the present hour remains a sealed book to Europeans. The handful of English from whom all our knowledge of the country is derived, have been hitherto too closely occupied in conquering, organizing, and tax-collecting, to find much time for careful and conscientious investigation of the darkness which broods over Hindoo manners and morals, as over Hindoo history. All foreign judgments, therefore, of what goes on at this moment, and has for the last sixty years been going on in India, necessarily proceed upon the supposition that the laws of western ethics may be safely applied to the actions of the most Eastern of Eastern races, and that we may reason back from known facts to remote and unknown causes with as much certainty in the dim and misty regions of Hindoo politics as if we were discussing the last change of administration in London, or the last revolution at Paris. We judge the acts of a Brahmin soldier by the rules we apply to those of an English trooper or a Mississippi volunteer, and we do so of necessity. There is nothing else for it. Our knowledge does not enable us to do more, and our love of justice and fair play will not allow us to do less.

When we remember, however, that neither zeal nor talents, nor honesty of purpose, have yet availed soldier or civilian, judge or missionary, to penetrate the awful veil behind which the Hindoo has shrouded his home, his religion and his morality, and reflect how little the utmost devotion to learning or philanthropy can effect against the difficulties offered by a complex language, broken into a thousand dialects, written in a dozen different alphabets, spoken by hundreds of different tribes, and by nearly two hundred millions of a race, whom immemorial tradition and an iron organization of society have fortified in the profession of a vaguely theist faith, and of a grotesque and facile morality, we must perceive that all judgments passed upon the East India Company and its acts are quite as likely to be wrong as right. Because a European population rarely rises in insurrection, unless driven to it through misgovernment or the love of national independence, it does not follow that Hindoos will never do so except for similar reasons. Because European soldiers can only be led to mutiny and to the merciless massacre of their officers under the stimulus of the most horrible provocation, it does not follow that the Sepoys have been wrung to murder by maltreatment. There are abysses in human nature everywhere which preachers and philosophers find it hard to fathom, but in heathen, Oriental human nature there are abysses which the plummet of Christian morality may in vain attempt to sound.

It is possible, therefore, to regard the East India Company rather as the victim of circumstances than as a criminal condemned on satisfactory evidence. The East India Company has conquered a great empire, and so far has governed it and kept it. For many years back, during the only period of its history in which it had either time or means for the work of reform, it has, to all intents and purposes, occupied the same position as the Parliament of Paris in the halcyon days of the Bourbon dynasty. In most of the leading acts of Government, it has filled the humble rôle of a registrar of the edicts of the Board of Control, over whose policy, whether right or wrong, it had no better controlling power than the right of uttering barren protests. Sins both of commission and omission have unquestionably been committed—horrible abuses have been winked at, golden opportunities have been let slip, but we must not let our indignation interfere with our impartiality in judging this great historic institution. The English Government is entitled to its share of condemnation as well as the Company, and under the new régime which is now to be established, the questions to be solved by England will be less of men than of measures. It is not by the persons who shall administer the Government of Hindostan, but by the principles upon which that Government shall act, that India must be won or lost to civilization and to Christianity.

Despoiling the City.

There are two ways of robbing the public, one of which is by taking money out of the Treasury, and the other, and by far the most serious and reprehensible, is by injuring the business facilities of the City whereby property is depreciated in value and the burden of taxation is increased. It is bad enough to suffer from either of these methods of depleting the public pocket, but to suffer from them both is an intolerable grievance. Yet this *kind of suffering is what the people of New-*York have long had to endure at the hands of their public servants.

The commercial supremacy of New-York depends upon the remarkable combination of natural advantages for the shipment of goods which this City possesses over any other seaport on the Atlantic coast. One of these great advantages is owing to the wedge-like shape of the lower end of the Island on which the City is built. A river running on each side of the City affords a vast extent of water-front for the accommodation of ships and steamers, yet brings them in close proximity, whereby a great saving, both of time and money, is effected in transferring goods from one vessel to another. But this splendid natural advantage which affords such facilities for the transactions of commerce, our Common Council are on the point of rendering of no avail by compelling certain lines of steamers to land their cargoes at a remote part of the City, miles away from the points where the business of the City centres. And this to be done, not at the request of any of the parties whose interests are involved in the change; but to oblige certain parties who have wharf property to dispose of in another part of the City. A glance at the map of the City will show that the great forwarding lines, and the steamers connected with the railroads and canals, must naturally centre at the lower end of the City, and that the nearer their landings are together the greater must be the facility for the landing and transhipment.

Accordingly we find clustered together, extending on each side from the Battery, the East River steamers, the Philadelphia steamers, the boats connecting with the New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Baltimore Railroads, the Southern steamships, and the North River steamers. In this immediate neighborhood, too, have been built large warehouses for the reception of goods from these vessels, and the merchants who are connected with them have their counting-houses and stores close by. The easy and cheap transhipment of freight by means of the close proximity of the wharves and dépôts of these various forwarding lines, ensures an enormous amount of business to flow to this City, which would otherwise be diverted to other cities.

But the Board of Aldermen, with a reckless disregard of the interests of the City, have passed an ordinance compelling the East River and the North River boats to land at points very remote from those where the exigencies of trade require them to lie. The inevitable consequences of this measure, if it should become a law, will be to divert a vast amount of business from New-York which now finds its way here. In the fierce competition now waging between the various forwarding lines for the business of the West and Southwest, the difference of twenty-five cents a head on passengers and one cent on a hundred pounds of freight, will, in the cost of transportation, turn a vast amount of trade from our own roads and canals to those of other States And a much greater cost than this will be caused by the proposed change of steamboat landings. The People's Line of steamers might partially avoid the loss which will be put upon their boats by going over to Jersey City, while the Sound steamers might land at South Brooklyn. In either case the City would be a loser to an incalculable amount by the business which would be actually driven from us by the folly of our City Government.

But we are not without hope, that this nefarious scheme may be defeated. The Committee of the Board of Councilmen, appointed to listen to remonstrances against the measure hold another meeting to-day, and as they have but one more day of official existence, they may delay their report and leave this important measure to be disposed of by their successors. The scheme of removing the steamboat landings is one fraught with such momentous consequences to the prosperity of the City, that it is hardly credible that the Councilmen should be guilty of conniving in the outrage perpetrated by the Board of Aldermen to serve the private speculations of The Bowery Boy and the Fort Greenwood sale, were mere trifles compared with this scheme for the removal of the steamboat landings.

CONSCIOUS PATRIOTISM AND THE PRESIDENT.—The devotion of Mr. BUCHANAN to the strictest forms of the law is notorious. In his first Presidential Message he arrayed the sympathetic indignation of the whole filibustering community, and branded the expeditions of General WALKER with the most emphatic phrases that the language of condemnation can supply. And it would seem from this that the strictly illegal steps taken by Commodore PAULDING in an excess of patriotic and honorable zeal, to carry out the dearest wishes of the Presidential heart, are likely to be visited with the stern awards of Roman justice. Mr. BUCHANAN stands to his over-faithful representative in the Gulf Squadron, almost in the relation of the Consul MANLIUS to his son, who won a victory by disobeying orders.

But positive as the formal fault of Commodore PAULDING may have been, the substantial service which he has rendered to the good name of his country must endear him to the President as it has already commended him to the cordial gratitude of the people. With the strength and the simplicity of a true sailor, Commodore PAULDING put his "general" instructions into "special" effect on the first opportunity of doing so. He found the "lawless adventurers" of whom he was in search, within reach of his guns, and he took them. Neither the Nicaraguan authorities nor WALKER himself entered any protest against the act. Whatever the captive filibuster may now say in regard to his capture, it is on record that he surrendered himself at once to Commodore PAULDING without entering any formal objections of any kind to the arrest. It is possible that the faculties of General WALKER may have been paralyzed by the peremptory action of the honest and gallant American officer to whom he had been addressing the most mendacious and impertinent letters, and whose men he had been menacing with death on a friendly shore. But it is very certain that he forbore to repeat to Commodore PAULDING what he had asserted so confidently in his epistles, "that the American Government had admitted his expedition to be lawful," and that he gave himself up to justice like any other criminal overtaken by the police.

It will be gratifying to the country to know, by the way, on what authority the statement of WALKER in regard to the views of the American Government was made; and the President owes it to the nation, as well as to himself, to give the lie to this bold assumption of administrative complicity in some very conspicuous way. Not less does he owe it to the nation and to himself, to testify his high sense of the decision, manliness and essential patriotism of the officers who assumed the responsibility of clearing our national escutcheon of the blots and defacements inflicted upon it by a long toleration of quasi pirates in their felonious plots and their atrocious acts.

THE KANSAS QUESTION AND THE SOUTH.—The Mobile Register, in reply to our request for information as to the motive of the Southern zeal on behalf of the Lecompton Constitution, says:

"Our guide in viewing this whole question, we desire to inform our Northern cotemporary, is a strict and faithful adherence to the principle of the Kansas-Nebraska act—the freedom of the people of the Territories to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way—through the medium of a Convention delegated by them for the purpose, or by the whole people themselves in council, if they should choose that way—and non-intervention by Congress or any other authority outside. If this principle is adhered to and vindicated, whatever may be the fate of Slavery in any instance as involved in its maintenance, the South will be satisfied. But it will not tolerate a violation of this principle; and firmly and thoroughly convinced, as we are, that this principle would be flagrantly violated in the refusal of Congress to admit Kansas with a Constitution framed at Lecompton, we feel assured that we do not misrepresent the sentiment of the South in declaring that it will not submit to its rejection."

The South, according to this statement, is governed exclusively by a desire that the people of Kansas should be allowed to decide for themselves by what Constitution they will be governed;—the only qualification it admits is, that their will in the premises shall be ascertained in a legal manner.

Now an election was held on the 21st instant, at which part of the Constitution was submitted to the public judgment. This was done by direction of the Convention which had the power, as all concede, to do it. On the 4th of January the whole Constitution is to be submitted in like manner to the popular vote;—and this is done by a Legislature acknowledged to have been duly elected and to have full power to take this action. Both these elections are legal and valid. Now suppose the first election should show that 6,000 of the inhabitants of Kansas are in favor of the Lecompton Constitution,—either with or without Slavery,—and that the January election should show that 12,000 are opposed to it? Which of the two would express the real sense of the majority of the people of Kansas? And by which should Congress be guided in its endeavor faithfully to carry out the fundamental principle of the Nebraska bill?

WALKER AT NEW-ORLEANS.—The New-Orleans Delta denounces the removal of F. H. CLACK, Esq., from the office of District-Attorney, for his alleged remissness in suffering General WALKER to take his departure for Nicaragua. The Delta asserts that this is not the true reason for his removal, and that as long ago as in May last Senator SLIDELL offered the place to another person. Mr. CLACK, it declares, acted with the utmost vigilance in the Walker case. The Delta adds:

"If there be any kind of pride left in Southern Senators, they will rebuke such contemptible proceedings by demanding the publication of all the proceedings here in regard to General WALKER's arrest, and the correspondence relating thereto, in possession of the Administration; and, while so engaged, we hope they will look into the Frontentiac dispatch on the Tehuantepec affair also."

PERSONAL.—It is understood that the venerable JOSIAH QUINCY is writing a Life of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, and that all the voluminous papers left by the latter have been placed in his hands for that purpose. It is thought that part at least of the work will be ready for publication in February.

Senator SUMNER, acting under the advice of his physicians, intends returning to Chicago, and will probably extend his travels to Egypt and the East.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—[illegible] Mozart's celebrated opera, "Fidelio," will be given, with Madame ANNA CARESCHI, the new prima donna, as the heroine. [illegible] Pizarro are also in the cast. A [illegible] society will assist in the choruses.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—Yesterday, with [illegible] weather, came the [illegible] and the attendance of their [illegible] the programme that there will be "no [illegible] on account of the weather." The [illegible] inaugurated last night at Deacon's Saloon, [illegible] were sorry to notice a falling off in the usual [illegible] ance. We hope that these [illegible] will not be allowed to sleep under the [illegible] of hard times. The quartet in [illegible] Bartolfore, of Messrs. NOIZ, BUSCHNE, [illegible] Schmidt, all proficients on the [illegible] instruments, and with an extensive experience in chamber music. The programme was as follows: 1. Quartet No. 6, by [illegible] 2. Le pressant, Rossini, (sung by [illegible] 3. Grand trio, No. 67, by [illegible] (played by Mess. GRAEVER-JOHNSON, [illegible] and BUSCHNE.) 4. Lied, by Mr. [illegible] 5. Quartet, No. 2, by [illegible] [illegible] powerful voice was heard to advantage [illegible] selected for its exhibition. An artist of [illegible] ability, should be heard more often. The two [illegible] were excellently played, and gave general satisfaction.

Mme. GRAEVER-JOHNSON [illegible] the novelty of the evening in Mr. LISZT's composition, which was heard for the first time in New-York. It is a work of unusual scope, and occupies more than any half dozen others we have heard lately. The meaning to be sure is a little obscure, but it is never small and cloying. Mr. LISZT has an evident leaning towards the New-Weimar German school; but his thoughts are more classic, vast, symphonic and shapely than we find in the works of its avowed disciples. This trio is a huge step in chamber music, and will, if anything can, give new interest and vitality to this style of composition. It was very well played, and Mme. GRAEVER-JOHNSON gave fresh evidence that she is an artist of the first class. Her touch, firm and delicious; her execution brilliant, and her phrasing, full of sentiment and intelligence, were particularly noticeable in Mr. LISZT's work. Mme. JOHNSON is so much superior to any other female player who has visited us, that it is impossible to hint any comparisons. In the male sex she has but one or two rivals. We trust that we shall have many opportunities of hearing this very accomplished lady in the concert-room.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—The indefatigable BRYANTS have produced a new pantomime, called "The Golden Egg," which, since its first production on Christmas night, has been repeated with increasing success. Why it is called the "Golden Egg" we were not in time to find out, but suppose that it has some important connection with the old nursery story, sufficient to make it intelligible to the younger members of society. Certain it is, that without any particular inclination towards clear construction, the "Golden Egg" is one of the best pantomimes ever produced in this country. From the moment it commences until the curtain descends on the last scene, the audience is kept upon the most intractable of broad grins. It may be objected that some of the wildest explosions of laughter are provoked by some of the oldest of tricks. But like says nothing, for these old tricks are the best ever invented by the Bryants, and mingled with them are scores of new ones, equally good. The business of the stage is never idle for a moment; everything goes by magic as it should in a pantomime, and the only objection that can be urged is that you are too desperately comfortable, for that in the end you wish something would fall, just to set you right with the management. The Harlequin was of course excellent, and the gentleman who played the Harlequin admirable. Without overstepping the bounds of his specialty, he does many things which are not often attempted. Indeed, this pantomime is so excellently rendered, so thoroughly worked and so entirely comical, that it is impossible for the [illegible] to see it without admiring the [illegible] skill which produces these results, and the [illegible] harmony of all the artists engaged in the production. It deserves, and will doubtless enjoy, a long run. "The Golden Egg," and the grand ballet of "La Bonquetiere," will be played to-night. A matinée performance takes place at mid-day, and generally attracts a large and lovely audience. It is a nice little provision for the young folks, and as an experiment has succeeded.

NEW MUSIC.—Mr. L. M. GOTTSCHALK, our distinguished pianist, of whose triumphal progress in South America we have flattering accounts, has just issued through his publishers, Wm. Hall & Son, three new and charming gems, which will, we trust, quickly find their way among the many admirers of American genius. There is something so fresh and invigorating about Mr. GOTTSCHALK's music that it never work from his pen is really a novelty, and not a mere vamping-up of other men's ideas. Gottschalk's music has to be studied, not only before [illegible] in its sentiment, and to every performer of sufficient skill we commend a patient study of the three pieces before us, viz.: 1. "Value Poetique;" 2. "Bananier;" and 3. "Ricordati." These stand well published in Messrs. HALL's usual style of elegance.

City Post-Office in the Park.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Two successive correspondents of a City paper find fault with the report of the Committee of Aldermen, recommending the southern corner of the Park for the New-York Post-Office, and ask why the City "should spoil the only green and beautiful spot for low Union-square, where hundreds of better places might be found—the Five Points for instance?"

I would ask who sees or enjoys "this beautiful spot," except the verest vagrants in the City? Where is a respectable female, or a respectable man ever seen in the Park by day, except to pass through, and who would dare even to do this at night?

The Park has now got into the centre of the best business town, therefore can never again be used for its original intention. Why not make it more available therefore, by concentrating there the most important public buildings, and by removing the railing and paving the whole Park, make a compact square with the City Hall at one end and the Post-Office at the other? This would be quite as extensive, and as ornamental to the City as the Place de la Concorde is to Paris, and much more available than now to citizens generally, who could cross it in every direction, whereas it is as much as one's life, certainly reputation, is worth to be seen there after dark.

As for the price paid by the General Government for the land, though it may be less than its value, yet I do not understand the City here the power to negotiate with it by getting a better price from Congress.

In what an absurd light do our City Fathers place themselves in appointing a Committee to go to Washington with their instructions duly signed up on before they go, and then gainsaying all their Committee have done. The Postmaster-General must think he has been dealing with boys. If the Aldermen did not know their minds better, they have no right to spend the people's money in sending Committees to Washington, or to take up the Postmaster- or Postmaster-General's time in a negotiation they did not mean to fulfill.

Certainly the Postmaster-General's ideas were when the Committee left, that the opinion of the proper law-officers alone, as to the title, was wanting to complete the arrangement; instead of which we find our superiors, forgetting their dignity, and situating both of which they should have thought of and decided upon before they sent their Committee on.

I trust we shall have the Post-Office at once, and in the Park, as our present building is a disgrace to the City. OUR NEW IMMIGRANT IN THE FIFTH PERSON.

CORRECTION.—We have been informed on good authority that Rev. Spence, in inviting Rev. Dr. [illegible] sermon to preach in his church, as stated in yesterday's TIMES, did not regard him as a "Unitarian." We have received, and have been requested to publish, sundry extracts from his sermons for the purpose of showing that he is not one in his religious belief. We are unwilling to open our columns to such a discussion, especially as the statement of the fact that he is not regarded as a Unitarian by Dr. Spence is sufficient to correct any erroneous impression which our paragraph yesterday may have occasioned.

THE DELTA PSI FRATERNITY.—An address, entitled "Our Brother's Voice," was delivered before this Society last evening, at Mozart Hall, by CHARLES H. MORRIS, Esq., Commerce and Merchant, he said, were the spirit which presided over American institutions and planted the wings of the national bird. It was announced that Mr. NEWMAN FITZ, Jr., who had been appointed the poet of the occasion, had declined on the ground that he was unable to prepare the address, but that he would deliver the annual poem. The address was preceded and followed by music from Grafulla's Band.

Anecdotes of Aaron Burr.

From Parton's Life of Burr.

BURR AND VANDERLYN.

The interest which distinguished men took in the education of youth has been before alluded to. He always had a protégé in training, upon whose education he lavished unwearied care, and never journey than he could always afford. The story of VANDERLYN, that most distinguished protégé, he once told some one which he often related in these later years.

He was riding along in a curricle and pair one day during his Presidential term, when one of his horses lost a shoe, and he stopped at the next blacksmith's to have it replaced. It was a lonely country place, not far from Kingston, in Ulster County, N. Y. He strolled about while the blacksmith was at work, and, resting, saw upon the side of a outside wall by a charcoal drawing of his own carriage and horses. The sketch, which must have been executed in a very few minutes, was wonderfully accurate and spirited, and he stood admiring it for some time. Turning round, he noticed a boy a little way off, dressed in coarse homespun.

"Who did that?" inquired BURR, pointing to the picture.

"I did it," said the boy.

The astonished traveler entered into conversation with the lad; found his intelligent though ignorant; learned that he was born in the neighborhood; and had no instruction in drawing, and was engaged to work for the blacksmith six months. BURR wrote a few words on a piece of paper, and said, as he wrote:

"My boy, you are too smart a fellow to stay here all your life. If ever you should want to change your employment and see the world, just put a clean shirt into your pocket, go to New-York, and go straight to that address," handing the boy the paper.

He then mounted his curricle and was out of sight in a moment. Several months passed away, and the circumstance had nearly faded from the busy Senator's recollection. As he was sitting at breakfast one morning, at Richmond Hill, a servant put into his hand a small paper parcel, saying that it was brought by a boy who was waiting outside. BURR opened the parcel, and found a coarse, country-made clean shirt. Supposing it to be a mistake, he ordered the boy to be shown in. Who should enter but the Genius of the Roadside, who placed in BURR'S hand the identical piece of paper he had given him. The lad was warmly welcomed. BURR took him into his family, educated him, and procured his instruction in the art which nature had indicated should be the occupation of his life-time. Afterward, BURR assisted him to Europe, where he spent five years in the study of painting, and became an artist worthy of the name.

While BURR himself was wandering in Europe, VANDERLYN was exhibiting pictures in the Louvre, at Paris, and received from NAPOLEON a gold medal, besides compliments and felicitations from the Emperor's own lips. VANDERLYN did all he could for his benefactor in Paris; but unhappily he had the successful artist's usual fortune—poverty embittered by glory. He afterwards had commissions from Congress, and painted the well-known "Landing of Columbus" for a panel in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington. He also painted the portraits of Colonel BURR and TREASON from which the engravings were taken by which their lineaments are now known to the public. VANDERLYN died only five years ago at Kingston, near the spot where he drew the charcoal sketch which decided his career.

GLANCES SLAYS MORE THAN THE SWORD.

One day in his office, a gentleman talked in the usual half-true manner of the evils of war. BURR remarked:

"Slander has slain more than the sword."

He added, who censured him for allowing so many hundreds of injurious paragraphs to circulate without contradiction, he replied that he had formerly supposed that his character was strong enough to bear such petty assaults, and he had felt himself safe in treating them with contempt. "But," he added, "I fear that I have committed a great error; the men who know their falsity are mostly dead, and the generation who now read them may take them for truths, being uncontradicted. I admit I have committed a capital error, but it is too late to repair it."

A GOLD FRIDAY'S ADVENTURE.

Returning one day, in about the seventieth year of his age, from a professional visit to Orange County, New-York, he related, with evident delight, an adventure which he had had during his absence. I have the story from the lady to whom he told it first.

It was one of the "cold Fridays" of tradition, when the incident occurred. So cold was it that few living creatures could long support life exposed to the blast. The snow lay deep on the ground; the roads were imperfectly broken; the air was filled with particles of snow blown about by the wind. Col. BURR had a ride of twenty miles before him that day, to attend a court which was on the day following. He had a companion with him, his partner in the law, a gentleman forty years his junior, who, after trying in vain to persuade him not to attempt the journey, refused, point blank, to accompany him. BURR consulted his man, and finding him willing to go, ordered round his sleigh, they set off about the middle of the day. As night drew on the roads became worse, and the cold increased to such a degree that to keep the blood in motion required laborious exertion. As the wind swept down from the mountains, even the horses shrank from facing it, and gave signs of yielding to the cold. For himself BURR had no fears; no weather could subdue him, but his driver began to occasion him constant anxiety, as the drowsiness premonitory of the torpor that precedes freezing was coming over him. Finding that the drowsiness increased, he resolved at last to stop at the next house they came to. They were now in a thinly settled country, which BURR had not seen since revolutionary times, when he had been much in the neighborhood with his regiment. About nine o'clock the light of a little cottage came in sight; to the door of which BURR'S summons brought an old lady, who proved to be the only inhabitant.

"Is there hospitality here?" asked BURR; "we are nearly dead with cold."

"Come in," was the old lady's prompt reply, "you are welcome to the best I have."

In a few minutes he had his half-frozen servant by the side of a blazing fire, and his horse in the stable. While they were getting warm, the hostess prepared supper, to which, in due time, they were invited. Restored then to the use of his faculties, BURR looked about him and observed that, though everything in the room was of an unpretending and inexpensive character, yet all was clean and nicely arranged. The only ornamental object was a plaster bust standing upon a little shelf. He had casually noticed this on entering the room, and looking now to ascertain which of the national favorites it was whom the old lady had selected to adorn her abode, he was astonished to discover that it was a bust of himself! Twenty years before, this would have been no unusual circumstance; but rare indeed was it then for him to be thus reminded of his former condition. More to amuse his servant than for any other reason, he said, as the old lady was putting away her dishes:

"What! have you got that vile traitor here?"

The woman paused in her work as he uttered these words. Her manner changed in a moment. Putting down some plates which she had in her hand, she walked slowly up to the fire where he was sitting, and standing before him, said with indescribable dignity:

"Sir, I have taken you in to-night, and have done the best I could for you; but if you say another word against AARON BURR, I'll put you and your man out where you came from quicker than you came in."

He apologized, and, after a time, succeeded in regaining her good will. He did not tell her who he was, nor could he recollect her. He supposed that he must have known her in early life, when, as the youngest colonel in the army, and the projector of that county, he must have been a brilliant figure in the imagination of a country girl.

THE BLOOD OF ALL THE MONTROSES.

A scene occurred in the dining-room of the house while he lay helpless, which may as well be related here. A gentleman called to engage board, found suitable rooms, and said he would call in the afternoon to say whether he would take them. He came to dinner. Addressing himself in an embarrassed, hesitating manner to the landlady, he said he had just heard of a circumstance which would deprive him of the pleasure he had anticipated in residing under her roof. He understood that AARON BURR was a boarder in the house and he really could not live in the same house with a man of that character.

The blood of all the Montroses was up in a moment. She rose from her chair, and said, with flashing eyes, and unbridled intensity of tone:

"You have been misinformed, Sir. Col. BURR is not a boarder in this house. He is my guest, Sir, my honored guest! Before any boarder in this house is served, Colonel BURR is served."

Then, turning to a servant who was waiting at the table, she said, in the manner of NAPOLEON ordering a column to the attack:

"Patrick, take along that gentleman's plate, and pen the door!"

PATRICK obeyed, and the "parade" passed without venturing any further observations.

This brave lady could not, of course, escape sharing, to some extent, the odium that surrounded the name of the man whose last days her wit and kindness cheered.

"What do you think I've heard this morning, Colonel?" said she to him on one occasion. "They say I'm your daughter."

"Well," said he, "we don't care for that, do we?"

"Not a bit!" was her reply. "But they say something else, Colonel," she continued; "they say I was your mistress."

"Do they?" said he, "I don't think we care much for that either, do we?"

"They may say what they choose," she replied, the gallant soldier's daughter!

"But," said he, taking her hand in both his, and lifting it to his lips, his hands shaking with paralysis, "I'll tell you something they might say that would be true! Let them say this of you: She gives the old man a home when nobody else would!"

He uttered these words with an emphasis so tender and penetrating, that two of his relatives, who were present, one a member of the bar, and the other a Judge, could not refrain from tears.

THE MORAL.

To judge this man, to decide how far he was unfortunate, and how far guilty; how much we ought to pity, and how much we ought to blame him, is a task beyond my powers. And what occasion is there for judging him, or for judging any one? We all know that his life was an unhappy failure. He failed to gain the small honors at which he aimed; he failed to live a life worthy of his opportunities; he failed to achieve a character worthy of his powers. It was a great, great pity. And any one is to be pitied who, in thinking of it, has any other feelings than those of compassion—compassion for the man whose life was so much less a blessing to him than it might have been, and compassion for the country, which, after producing so rare and excellent a kind of man, lost a great part of the good he might have done her.

As it was, he did the State some service, though they know it not. By being the first to turn to practical account the inherent weakness of our Constitution, by teaching the Democratic party how to carry elections, by the invention of fillibustering, by giving the country and General JACKSON a taste for southwestern acquisition, thus marshaling events the way that they would go, he, at least, accelerated the history of his country. In the wrong direction, you will say; true, but it was in the direction in which the country was destined to go, and go as far as the road led.

His duel with HAMILTON had the effect, finally, of rendering the practice of dueling entirely odious in the Northern States. That was a benefit. In suffering the consequences of that affair, he simply expiated the sins of his generation, and the expiation fell not unjustly upon him. He ought to have known better, and, knowing better, he had the fortitude to bear the scoffs of cowards. He was, upon the whole, I am inclined to think, a better man than HAMILTON; and it was well ordered, that by being the survivor, he should have the worst of the encounter.

It is to be said in praise of BURR, that in the various offices held by him, he acquitted himself well. He was an indefatigable and useful Senator; a Vice-President of ideal excellence. If he had been elevated a step higher, his Washington habit of taking the best advice before finally deciding upon an important measure, would have prevented the making serious mistakes. He would have been a good President. Instead of plundering the Treasury of his country, as HAMILTON predicted, he would have been more likely to spend twice his income in supporting the "dignity" of the office, and so have passed from the White House to the court of bankruptcy.

If his expedition had succeeded, it was in him, I think, to have run a career in Spanish America similar to that of NAPOLEON in Europe. Like NAPOLEON, he would have been one of the most amiable of despots, and one of the most destructive. Like NAPOLEON, he would have been sure, at last, to have been overwhelmed in a prodigious ruin. Like NAPOLEON, he would have been idolized and execrated. Like NAPOLEON, he would have had his half-dozen friends to go with him to St. Helena. Like NAPOLEON, he would have justified to the last, with the utmost sincerity, nearly every action of his life.

THE SONS OF NEW-ENGLAND ABROAD.—The scattered sons of New-England appear to have enjoyed the home festival of Forefathers' Day with remarkable zest. Banquets, speeches, toasts and orations were given in honor of the day at Montreal, Charleston, Chicago and other principal cities—not to mention the smaller township gatherings. At Montreal, Rev. ASA D. SMITH, of this City, delivered an oration. At Chicago, Deacon GARDIN, of Boston, was the principal attraction; he made a speech on a similar occasion fifty-four years ago. Among the South Carolinians the day was observed by New-Englanders with as much gusto as though Massachusetts were on friendly terms with that section. The Governor of the State was present at the dinner at the Mills House, and A. S. WILMERDING presided. Gov. ALLSTON responded in a long speech to a toast in honor of South Carolina.

THE ADRIATIC.—Extract of a letter from Capt. L. B. MACKINNON, of the Royal Navy, dated off Liverpool, Thursday, Dec. 3, 1857, on board the Adriatic:

"I am delighted with this magnificent ship; although we have been obliged to make the greatest portion of this passage under half-steam, I feel confident that she will eventually cross the Atlantic in twenty hours less than any other vessel afloat. I only mention twenty hours, as I wish to be well within the mark.

The internal arrangements, and economy, are admirable; and I feel satisfied that no person of experience can deny that the Adriatic, as a whole, is the most perfect sea-going steamer in the world; the clean, knife-like manner in which she cuts the water is a perfect marvel. When on an even keel there is no break or wave until the paddles strike the water. Astern, the sea is smoother than in any other place; the converging current cutting off the heads of sea as a scythe cuts grass. I never remember being in a ship which gave me so much confidence as to strength, stability, and power."

A PLAIN TALK WITH FARMERS, VILLAGERS, GARDENERS, &c. HARD TIMES have not affected the circulation of THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, save to increase it. Many thousands of new subscribers for 1858 have already been received, and are daily coming. This is what might have been expected, since the Publisher offers double the inducements proposed by any other similar journal in the world. THE AGRICULTURIST now gives, in every number, 32 double-column pages, superbly illustrated with new and beautiful engravings of rural objects of interest and utility. The single volume for 1857 (Vol. XVII.) will contain over 300 such engravings, while every page furnishes a great amount of valuable information in the various departments of Soil Culture, specially adapted to the wants of all who cultivate Farms, Gardens, Village Plots, &c.

FREE SEEDS.—Every subscriber to THE AGRICULTURIST for 1858, will be entitled to choose three packages from a list of fifty-one varieties of valuable seeds. See Catalogue of these seeds in the January number now ready. THE AGRICULTURIST has a regular subscription fully equal to at least a dozen of the ordinary Agricultural and Horticultural periodicals of the country, and the publisher is thus enabled to furnish a greatly superior paper, besides giving liberal seed-premiums to every subscriber. The size of THE AGRICULTURIST has just been increased by one-third, so that the present volume will be fully twice as valuable as any preceding one. Nearly FIFTY THOUSAND regular readers of THE AGRICULTURIST for the past year are testifying to its great superiority and value by sending in the names of thousands upon thousands of their friends and neighbors as subscribers. TERMS: $1 a year; Six Copies for $5. Ten or more copies, 50 cents each. Single numbers, 10c. As specimens, the numbers for November, December and January will be sent post-paid, on receipt of EIGHT 3-cent stamps. ORANGE JUDD, Publisher, No. 189 Water-st., near Fulton-st., New-York.

SEEDS—SEEDS FREE.—A CHOICE FROM fifty-one varieties. Every subscriber to THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST for 1858, will be presented with a choice of three packages from a list of fifty-one varieties of valuable seeds, free and post paid by the publisher. See catalogue of seeds in the January number (now ready). TERMS: $1 a year; (delivered in the City, $1 12½) single numbers, 10 cents. THE CITY [illegible] DE PARIS, [illegible] in the extensive [illegible] known as very complete [illegible] and Gift Establishment at No. 323 Broadway, [illegible] supervision of Mr. A. RANKEN. During the [illegible] immediately preceding Christmas, the story was [illegible] from morning until night with customers, a large proportion of whom were ladies. Fine [illegible] had to punch the tickets they could do to keep up [illegible] and deliver the presents. Nor was there any [illegible] of the rush yesterday. We had occasion to drop in during the afternoon, and it was really a work of time and difficulty to get up to the cashier's desk. The enterprise throws into the shade everything of a similar character ever attempted in New-York.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Adoption of the City-Hall Park Site for a New Post-Office—The Mayor Elect to Receive his Friends in the Governor's Room on New-Year's Day.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, President CASSIDY in the chair.

The following preamble and resolutions were offered by Alderman ADAMS and adopted unanimously.

Whereas, Daniel F. Tiemann, Esq., Mayor elect, will not enter upon the discharge of his official duties until after the first day of January, 1858; and

Whereas, many of our citizens are desirous of tendering to him their congratulations on the advent of the New-Year; therefore

Resolved, That the use of the Governor's Room be tendered to the Mayor elect on New-Year's Day, for the purpose of receiving the salutations of his fellow-citizens.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to Daniel F. Tiemann, Esq., by the Clerk of the Common Council.

A communication was received from the Comptroller in relation to the contract to regulate and grade Fourth-street, from First to Second avenues, accompanying the estimate made by the Surveyor having charge thereof, and giving a correct estimate made by the Surveyor of his Department. Ordered to be printed.

Another communication was received from the Comptroller in answer to a resolution, as to the authority of the City Inspector to collect fees in Franklin Market, and whether the same was not in violation of the Charter. The Comptroller states that the money paid into the City Treasury by George W. Pierce from May 8, 1857, to Dec. 17, 1857, for butcher stalls, was $[illegible]; and for Market fees, $227 24—total, $[illegible]. No money has been received from any other parties from that Market. The report concludes with the statement that the Finance Department has charge of the collections; and soon after the passage of the new Charter, the Comptroller authorized Mr. Isaacs to collect the Franklin Market fees, which has been done. Ordered to be printed.

A report of the Committee on Arts and Sciences in favor of concurring with the Board of Councilmen in purchase a portrait of Mayor Wood, to be deposited in the Governor's Room, was laid over.

The report on the disposal of the lower end of the Park for a site for a Post-Office was called up by Alderman FULLMER, who presented a communication from Mr. Charles F. Anderson, stating that, "having the drawing of the plans for the new Post-Office in his hands, under direction of the Honorable the Secretary of State, Postmaster-General, and fearing the City Board, as well as the public, may be prejudiced by delay, and in consequence of the erroneous impression entertained regards the site and building generally, submit me, therefore, respectfully, to submit the following facts: That it is the Postmaster-General's desire to make this building a model as regards arrangement, and a specimen of pure classic architecture.

"In all the offices to which the public will have access, are assigned on the ground floor, all round the building. The Postmasters' and Cashiers' establishments, with the sorting-rooms, occupying the second floor altogether. These apartments are entered from the grand projecting portico looking down Broadway. The public offices are approached through twenty-four doorways, so as to avoid any inconvenient clash of parties. Arcades are placed on three sides, so as to insure the public comfort in all seasons. In the centre of this building, on the ground floor, is a hollow, covered square for the reception of the United States mails, which will drive right through the building, and will be shut up while discharging and loading, thereby giving no inconvenience to the public thoroughfares.

"The ladies' entrance will be on the private street. (See illustration of Park plans.) The highest part of this building will be two stories, and a great portion of it but one story, presenting a beautiful, correct architectural front on every side.

"The unoccupied portions of the ground, as it will be left space on every side of this building, will be enclosed and picturesquely planted with fountains and statues on both sides and in front, and when completed, must form one of the most respectable of our City establishments. The exterior of the building being ornamented with thirty-six columns. The Postmaster-General's object in considering this subject in detail at so early a period was two-fold.

1. To ascertain if the site would be sufficiently extensive for the occupation of such a building as he proposed to erect in New-York; and 2. That the working-plans might be forthwith employed. My decision was, that the site could be better [illegible] for such a building; and I defy any architect, [illegible] and to architectural a [illegible] Broadway-street end of the Park, [illegible] will yet be occupied by the City Law Courts, as originally intended."

Alderman FULLMER made a strong speech in favor of disposing of that portion of the City Hall Park lying below a line drawn from the south-westerly corner of Park-place and Broadway, and the south westerly line of Beekman-street, where it intersects Nassau.

Alderman TOOTHE and OWENS opposed the adoption [illegible]

Alderman KEARN, WILSON, DRAKE and others spoke [illegible] and it was then adopted by a vote of 13 [illegible]

[illegible] Adams, Wilson, Corwin, Harris, Hoffmire, Clancy, Adams, Banta, Griffiths, Fullmer, Coulter, Wyckoff, Drake, [illegible]

[illegible] Healy, Tucker, McConnell, Meneghan, Minot, Owens, [illegible]

The report in relation to the iron pavement in Maiden-lane and Cortlandt-street was called up again by Alderman McCONNELL. The report states that in consequence of a clerical error, the weight of the block was put in at 128 lbs. instead of 225, but that the blocks have been cast the weight intended. It also calls for the appointment of inspectors for the Croton Aqueduct Board.

Alderman TOOTHE renewed his opposition on the ground before stated—namely, that the pavement so far as it has been put down is not good, and he would not be continued.

[illegible] half done the work, and thought [illegible] the exception that the blocks were too [illegible]

[illegible] debate, the report was adopted by a vote of 17 to 11.

Alderman CLANCY moved to suspend the usual order of business, in order to take up the Tax Levy from the Board of Councilmen. The report was read, when Alderman CLANCY moved to amend by adding $[illegible] for building County Jail; and also to add $[illegible] for deficiencies in salaries. Both were [illegible]

Alderman TOOTHE moved that the whole subject lie over one day.

Alderman CLANCY thought it best that the amendments should be made then, in order that it might be ready when it came up for final action. He moved to add $[illegible] for repairing Essex Market. Carried. He then moved to add $2,500 for arrearages of salaries of Supervisors. Carried. Also, to add $10,000 for the support of the Law Department of the Common Council. Carried. He then moved that the report be laid upon the table. Carried.

The Committee on Finance reported in favor of remitting assessment on the Methodist Episcopal Church in Eighteenth-street, on account of the opening of Central Park.

Alderman TOOTHE opposed the report. He was opposed to any union of Church and State, and thought that the various congregations should pay for their own religion, instead of calling upon the City.

Alderman ROBINSON, OWENS and DRAKE spoke in favor of it, and it was adopted.

The report in favor of donating $1,500 to the Children's Aid Society was adopted.

The report relieving Methodist Episcopal Church in Harlem from assessment for opening Fourth-avenue, [illegible] was adopted.

The Board then adjourned to this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Tuesday evening, [illegible] President in the Chair. There was not a full [illegible] in consequence of members or of visitors in the lobby on the evening of Monday.

The [illegible] of the Supreme Court, the choice of Washington—was decided to reference it, and the Corporation Counsel was directed to prepare a [illegible] in view of the contemplated alterations in the Council Chamber.

The resolution of the Board of Aldermen directing the Law Committee to memorialize the next Legislature for the passage of a law to enable the members of the Common Council to receive remuneration for their duties, of which they had been deprived by the new Charter, was brought up for consideration, and was unanimously adopted.

The Board concurred with the Board of Aldermen in extending the civilities of the Governor's Room for the use of the Mayor elect, Daniel F. Tiemann, Esq., and his friends on New-Year's Day.

The bill of Mr. Brown, landlord of Tammany, for refreshments for Mayor Wood's Police force detailed for the maintenance of the peace and for his protection on the 11th of June last, was again brought up, and lost for want of a constitutional vote.

The report of the Committee for Repairs and Supplies in favor of concurring to pay the architects as the work progresses for building Tompkins' Market, after some debate was laid over.

Councilman OTTERSON moved the appropriation of $[illegible] to pay the expenses of the Special Committee and Boards on a deputation to Washington upon the subject of the erection and location of a New Custom-House. Adopted.

Councilman BURDEN moved a similar resolution to defray the expenses of the Committee to Philadelphia upon the business of the Board of Health, according to law.

Councilman BRADY, who was one of the delegation, but who did not go, wished to know how the expenses arose, or his name were included.

Councilman HASWELL said that four of the members went only a week, and had to entertain several gentlemen from other cities.

Councilman BRADY asked if the honor was not [illegible] Three hundred dollars for the board of four gentlemen for a week was pretty well. He could also see such sum when he went.

Councilman BURDEN thought $300 a small sum.

Councilman BEALE would ask Councilman BRADY what were his expenses in Carnfield. (Laughter.)

Councilman BURDEN argued for the propriety of the appropriation, and so also did Councilman WARREN.

The appropriation was ultimately adopted.

The Board agreed to concur in the recommendation for the discharge of the Law Committee in the matter pending in Court between D. D. Conover and Chauncey Dewitt.

A number of persons were named as Commissioners of Deeds, in place of others whose term of office has expired.

The Report of the Committee on Fire Department on a resolution relative to the freezing of Hydrants, was received and adopted.

The Report states, "That all that is necessary to preserve the hydrants in a serviceable condition during our severest Winters has been done by the Croton Aqueduct Department, and it only remains for us to aid them in their efforts, by requiring a rigid enforcement of the Ordinances, and prohibiting the opening of the fire hydrants by improper persons and at improper times."

The preamble and resolution for the reduction of stage fare from 6¼ to 5 cents was laid over.

The Report of the Special Committee on the location of the New Post-Office in the Park (which had been just adopted in the Board of Aldermen) was brought up for concurrence.

Councilman JONES, as Chairman of the Special Committee of the Board of Councilmen on this subject, asked whether referring the matter to the Committee to-night would kill the matter for this year.

The President explained.

Councilman BEALE was very anxious to have the matter referred for examination.

Councilman WARREN said that would virtually be killing it. He would move that it be laid on the table and printed in the minutes. Carried.

Upon vote, a bath house was agreed to be located for the convenience of citizens in the neighborhood of the Battery.

Half an hour was consumed in arguing the question as to the adoption of a report in favor of allowing W. W. Fox and others to construct a pier on the East River, at foot of Twenty-first-street, the Corporation Attorney having decided that the Board have a right to allow parties to build a pier upon property that may be proved to be their own.

A member said that Mr. Busted had evaded the question, whether the property belonged to the City.

After further debate, upon vote, the motion was lost for want of a constitutional vote.

After the transaction of some other comparatively unimportant business, the Board adjourned to next day at 5 o'clock.

Board of Governors.

There was a full attendance at the Board of Governors of the Almshouse on Tuesday, with the exception of the Mayor elect. The salary of Mr. Kelleck, Superintendent of the out-door Poor, was increased from $1,200 to $2,000 per annum. Governor MOLONEY moved that the Board proceed to ballot for a new Governor. Governors TOWNSEND and DUCKO opposed such ballot, the former not being prepared to vote, and the latter stating that his party were not agreed as to the selection of their candidate. The President stated that there were at least twenty-five candidates. The matter, after some discussion, was ordered to be laid over until an agreement can be had among the Democratic members as to the individual for whom they will interest themselves. The superintendent and overseer of Bellevue Hospital were notified that their services will not be wanted after the ninth of next month.

The majority report, adverse to the entrance of the Homœopathists at Bellevue Hospital, was brought up, Governor B. F. FINCKNEY promising to produce also the minority report. A motion being made to enter the majority report on the minutes, and to print 250 copies, a debate ensued, which ended in the printing being deferred until the minority report could also be printed with it. The Board will proceed, at 9 o'clock on Wednesday, with the members elect of the Legislature, to visit the various institutions under their care.

The Central Park Commissioners.

TUESDAY, Dec. 29, 1857.

The Board held a special meeting this day at 3 o'clock.

Present: Commissioners COOLEY, DILLON, RUSSELL, BUTTERWORTH, GRAY, HUTCHINS, FIELDS, GREEN, STRONG and KELLEY.

The minutes were read and approved. The withdrawal of the sum of $10,000 was authorized for the payment of persons employed on the Park, &c., and the Treasurer was directed to pay the same.

It was resolved that the maps that have been prepared of the Park, in sections, be placed in charge of the Clerk, at the office, to be submitted to such persons as desire to examine the same, with the object of preparing a plan for the Park.

After transacting a variety of routine business, the Board adjourned to Tuesday next at 1 o'clock.

The Homicide in Cannon-street—Coroner's Inquest and Verdict of the Jury.

Coroner HILLS held an inquest yesterday at the the Eleventh Ward Station-house in the case of JACOB REICHESTER who died on Sunday afternoon at No. 82 Cannon-street, from the effects of violence at the hands of HENRY SENNEF and wife.

ANDREW REICHESTER, the son of the deceased, was he first witness—He stated that on Sunday last between one and two o'clock in the afternoon he went down stairs into the yard to get a pail of water; as he was turning the handle of the hydrant a son of Mr. SENNEF came running up the alley crying, and his back covered with snow; as he was going up stairs he met the boy and his father, when the latter asked him why he had thrown snow on his boy; he told he had not thrown the snow on the boy, when he prisoner said he would go and tell the witness' father; he told his father that he had thrown snow on his boy; he did not understand all that was said; his father told the prisoner two or three times to go out of the room, as he believed he only wanted to pick a quarrel with him; there had been bad feelings all Summer between his father and the prisoner; as Mr. SENNEF would not leave the room his father finally took hold of him to put him out; they both got into the hall and were striking each other; the prisoner struck the first blow; in a short time Mrs. SENNEF, the prisoner's wife, came up stairs, having an axe-handle under her apron; in a moment she hit the deceased twice on the temple, and then quickly put it under her apron again; she took it out a second time, and struck the deceased a third blow on the back of the head, and made a fourth blow, but it missed; CASPAR MYERS came up now and separated the parties; after being separated his father went into his room and sat down, saying he was dizzy; the prisoner went down stairs hallooing, and saying that if he got a chance again at the deceased, he would die before he would stop fighting him; his father died about ten minutes after going into his room.

JOHN BOHM, who resides at No. 82 Cannon-street, stated that he was present when the difficulty occurred between the deceased and the prisoner; he saw Mr. SENNEF strike the deceased twice on the side of the head with an axe-handle and twice with her hands on the face; Mr. SENNEF was very angry with Mr. MYERS for parting him and the deceased.

JOHN MYERS, residing at No. 80 Cannon-street, stated that he heard a noise on the yard, and upon the prisoner and the deceased were fighting; he saw Mrs. SENNEF have a hatchet-handle in her hand, but did not see her strike the deceased; she might have struck the deceased without seeing it.

CASPAR MYERS testified to having separated the deceased and the prisoner; ten minutes after he had seperated them, he saw the deceased come to the door of his room, having a hatchet in his hand, and dare the prisoner to come in.

CHRISTIANA REICHESTER, the wife of the deceased, and several other witnesses were called, and substantiated the statements of the previous witnesses.

DRS. FINNELL, FRESCOW and BEACH made the post mortem examination of the deceased. They gave it as their opinion that the deceased came to his death by compression of the brain from extravasated blood, the result of injuries to the head. They stated further that persons died occasionally from extravasation of blood into the cerebellum, such as were met with in the deceased, who had never received any injury to the head. The age and constitution of the deceased, aggravated by passion or excitement, was sufficient to the production of apoplexy.

At the conclusion of the evidence, the Jury, after a brief charge from the Coroner, rendered the following verdict:

"That JACOB REICHESTER, the deceased, came to his death by compression of the brain from extravasated blood, the result of violence received at the hands of HENRY and MARY SENNEF, on the 27th of December, at No. 82 Cannon-street."

In giving the verdict, the prisoners were examined. SENNEF stated that he was 30 years of age, and a native of Germany. In relation to the charge against him he said: "I did not strike the deceased till he had struck me twice in the face." Mrs. SENNEF gave her age and nativity the same as her husband. Relative to the charge, she said: "The deceased struck me first, and then I struck him with a small stick of wood on the back."

Mr. JOHN D. CONVERSE, of Twelfth-street, in whose employ SENNEF has been for several years, became bail for SENNEF. Mrs. SENNEF was committed to prison, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Police Intelligence.

ATTEMPT TO ROB A BROKER.—A German, giving his name as WM. Alarice, was arrested yesterday, charged with having attempted to steal $2,000 from the office of Hart W. Witzen, broker, No. 74½ Wall-street. The prisoner was taken to the Tombs, and locked up by Justice GUNNOLEY to answer the charge.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—David Buckly was arrested yesterday by officer Steele, of the Twentieth Ward, on a charge of insulting a woman named Mary Kennedy, while she was walking in the street Christmas evening. He was held to bail by Justice FLAMMER to $300 to appear for trial.

STABBING.—At a late hour Monday night Francis B. Cadden, while in the grocery store corner of Hudson and Canal-street, was assaulted by half-a-dozen men, and stabbed in the back and otherwise injured. Bernard Kelly, charged with being one of the assailants, was arrested yesterday and locked up for examination.

Fires.

FIRE IN LAURENS-STREET.—At a late hour on Monday night, a fire was discovered in the carriage manufactory of DANIEL J. DUESENBURY, No. 102 Laurens-street. The fire originated in the varnish room on the third floor, but was speedily extinguished. The stock was considerably damaged by water. Mr. DUESENBURY was insured for $2,000 in the Rutgers Insurance Company; $1,000 in the Sheffield Insurance Company, and $1,500 in the Pacific Insurance Company. On the building there was an insurance of $1,400 in the Broadway Insurance Company.

FACTORY AGENCY.—The Newburyport Herald states that Mr. REMINGTON, agent of the Salisbury mills, is about to resign his agency. We are informed that he has resigned, and that the vacancy is not filled. This is a very important and desirable position, this establishment being one of the largest in the country, and the mills and machinery generally near and of the most approved description, and an exception to many others, being now in operation.—Boston Transcript.

KINGS COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—An adjourned meeting of this Board was held yesterday afternoon.

A communication from the City Judge, asking for further accommodations for his Court and additional furniture, was received and referred to the Committee on Courts.

The Law Committee reported that the Board of Supervisors had no power to appoint a Matron for the Jail. The report was adopted.

The Committee on Accounts of County Treasurer reported that they had examined the paid coupons of the last fiscal year by the cash-book and found them correct, and destroyed the same in accordance with the order of the Board. The amount was $21,603 19.

The bills of the Supervisors were presented and ordered paid. The largest bill was that of Supervisor BERGEN—$[illegible]. The bills of the other members ranged from $34 to $[illegible] each.

The resignation of JOHN A. LOTT, as Commissioner of Record, was received and accepted.

A resolution offered by Mr. BERGEN, "That the Board apply to the Legislature for the passage of an act requiring that all persons convicted of crime and liable to imprisonment for over ten days in this County, shall be sentenced to imprisonment in the Penitentiary," was voted down after a long discussion.

The Board adjourned until Jan. 18.

NEW-JERSEY.

ARREST OF A THIEF FROM PATERSON.—Officer CLARK, of Jersey-City, yesterday, upon the arrival of the Paterson train at the Erie Railroad Dépôt, arrested a man named THOMAS SPENCE, charged with stealing a watch, gold locket, and box and three port-monnaies from a gentleman named THOMAS COXZIE, in Paterson. SPENCE is an Englishman, from Manchester, and having recently arrived in this country, in a destitute condition, had quartered himself upon the hospitality of Mr. COZZIE, who was also from Manchester. The stolen property was found upon his person. Officer CLARK took him back to Paterson and lodged him in the Passaic County Jail.

MILITARY ELECTION.—An election for Colonel and Major for the Second Regiment, Hudson Brigade, was held at the Hudson House, in Jersey City, on Monday evening, and resulted in the selection of DENNIS E. GRESSLY, Jr., as Colonel, and BENJAMIN F. GRIFFITH as Major. Mr. GRESSLY formerly held the position of Major in the regiment, and Mr. GRIFFITH has been long connected with the New-York Light Guard.

SPEARING A WATCH.—PATRICK PATRICKS was arrested in Jersey City yesterday, by Officer CLARK, for stealing a gold watch from LOUIS FERSON, Captain of a vessel lying in the stream. The accused was taken before Recorder BEDFORD, who committed him to Jail for trial.

☞ The entertainment for the Benefit of the Poor of Jersey City, given at Metropolitan Hall, on Monday evening, was quite successful. The Hall was crowded to excess. Nothing was charged for admission, but a collection was taken up, which, together with a donation of $25 from Mayor WESTERVELT, amounted to $160.

Letter from Northern Mexico.

TERRIBLE DEPREDATIONS BY INDIANS—MURDERS, ROBBERIES AND INSURRECTIONS.

From the Brownsville (Texas) Flag, Dec. 9.

El Restaurador gives dreadful accounts of depredations committed by the Indians in Nuevo-Leon and Coahuila. Several families on the northern borders of those States have been murdered, and a great number of ranches have been thoroughly stripped of everything in the way of stock and produce. Five men and three women were going from San Nicolas to Parras with horses and cattle, when they were attacked and scattered. Another party, with carts, going to Monterey, met the same fate while crossing the Nueva River. A regiment under command of D. MARIANO MARINA, is in pursuit of this gang of savages.

All the papers of Zacatecas, Chihuahua and Durango contain appalling accounts of the destruction of property and lives by the Indians in those states. A force of over one thousand horse riflemen have been organized, and it is thought the savages will be quelled. The Legislature of Zacatecas had appropriated $100,000 for the purpose of aiding in raising troops and paying the expenses of a campaign going through the frontier portions of the State.

The Heralds states that MEJIA, a notorious chief, at the head of 400 men, captured Queretaro, and, in the name of the defenders of religion, delivered it up to pillage, after which he consented for a sum of money to be bought off. General ARRAZAS defended the place vaily with a small garrison, but having been treacherously invited to a conference, under the pretext of settling the terms of capitulation, he was fired upon by the bandits; he was dangerously wounded, and caused his soldiers to disperse. After MEJIA and his party had done as much pillaging as they wanted, they vacated the town. We learn, from a gentleman who received a letter from that part of the country, that MEJIA has retreated to Queretaro and taken possession of the place. We also learn that a number of the surrounding towns have been in the possession of by the insurrectionists.

Several persons have been apprehended near Puebla on the suspicion of conspiracy. CARLOS D. FRANCO, a notorious desperado near Aquasculientes, had a great many papers found about his person giving information relative to several who have been concerned in conspiracies against the Government.

The Slaves of Mr. Custis.

From the Boston Traveller.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 24.

The emancipation of the slaves left by the late Geo. W. P. Custis, of Arlington, will, it is feared, be much retarded, if not wholly prevented, by the heirs, chief among whom stands JOHN WASHINGTON, Esq., the man who cuts down the old ancestral oaks of Mount Vernon to sell for canes, and who charges visitors fifty cents a head for the privilege of visiting the tomb of WASHINGTON, and who has turned the home of the Father of his Country into a slaveholding pen. All attempts to see the will of Mr. Custis have proved abortive. After much inquiry, it has been admitted by the heirs that the slaves are to be set free in five years. The poor darkies tell a different story. They of the Arlington House, say that they were called into the room, and stood by the deathbed of their master, and that after having taken leave of each of them personally, he told them that he had left them, and all his servants, their freedom. At Arlington there were about one hundred negroes. Mr. Custis owned two plantations about sixty miles below Richmond, on which were about 250 more slaves. According to the statement of those who were about him at the time of his death, he died in the full possession of his senses. Besides, it is well known that the old gentleman always said that he intended to free his slaves at his death. I have frequently heard him say as much, though not in exact terms. Unfortunately, when this declaration was made to the house servants of Arlington, no white man was in the room, and the testimony of negroes will not be taken in Court. It is already whispered about town that foul play is in progress in regard to those negroes on the Virginia plantations; that they are now being sold South; and that all of them will be consigned to hopeless Slavery unless something is done. Unless the will is produced, nothing can be done. And that there is a will, and that the will contains something in regard to the emancipation of the negroes, has been publicly admitted by the heirs. It would be awful if the last remaining member of the household of WASHINGTON should not be allowed, should be prevented by fraud, from carrying out those precepts which he had learned, standing by the knee, and hearing from the lips, of that immortal Sage!

The Weather and Navigation.

From the Albany Journal, Dec. 28.

The cold atmosphere of the past two nights has filled the river with ice, which continued to move until about noon. Since then it has remained stationary, and by the aid of the falling snow ice has been made rapidly. It looks now as if navigation was about closed. The railroad ferry-boats continue to run, and will not cease running until the ice in the river is strong enough for persons to walk upon it with perfect safety. The passenger boats for New-York were "firing up" at noon, a pretty sure indication that they would leave at an earlier hour than usual to-day. The stopping of the ice here is doubtless caused by damming up below, which will render a passage over the bars at Castleton quite difficult and hazardous.

From the Hartford Times, Dec. 28.

The river closed up with ice this morning from Middletown as far up as the clay banks, between Hartford and Wethersfield. The ice continued to run very slowly opposite this city this afternoon. Last year the river closed up Dec. 6.

A QUEER APPOINTMENT.—Whatever vices may be charged to the account of St. Lucifer, ingratitude at least is not one of them. There is truth in the old adage: "The d—l takes care of his own." No man knows this better than the conductor and owner of the Satanic organ in this City. BENNETT has of late years been moving all the powers—mundane and infernal—over which he has any influence, to be recognized as an equal being with men of respectability. It was a strange and inconsistent desire in such a person; but who can account for the caprices and hallucinations of age? He exhausted all the acts of which he is master, to extort a social or political recognition from President PIERCE; but though willing to avail himself of the Herald's support, PIERCE was not bold enough to pay the price demanded for it, and we well know how "Poor PIERCE" was assailed with Satanic malice in consequence.

Mr. BUCHANAN has proved more facile than his predecessor, and BENNETT's star is in the ascendant. He has actually been "dined and wined" at a private dinner party at the White House; at which, besides the President, one other member of the Administration was present—Mr. COBB. The affair was kept very quiet, Mr. BUCHANAN, though willing "to do good by stealth," did not wish to blush at finding it fame; and BENNETT was sagacious enough to save the President from the annoyance that the publicity of his amiable weakness would occasion.

What important events are to result from this initial success, we do not now venture to predict. The appointment of BENNETT's son to a cadetship at West Point will be a trifling affair, not calculated to affect the policy of the United States at present. We do not believe that the father will get the appointment of Minister to the Court of NAPOLEON, but, as he is willing to compromise on the Austrian Ambassadorship, it is within the range of possibility that he may be privileged to serve this favored land at Vienna.

Meanwhile he is not without influence even in Paris, where the female head of the Herald dynasty receives a graceful patronage, and wields a charming pen. Mr. BUCHANAN, like the gallant gentleman he is, paid homage at her Parisian court, and, like all the rest of the world, was delighted. We can judge of the favorable impression she made upon the President, by the recent appointment as American Consul at Bordeaux, (one of the most lucrative consulates in Europe,) of a Monsieur FLEURET, an artist of the Bennet family in Paris.

No one seems to know who this M. FLEURET is, except that he was once attached to some insignificant French Consulate in the West Indies; and has since figured as an itinerant showman in France, until his elevation as a hanger-on of the female department of the Herald at Paris. With such powerful recommendations in his favor, the question of his American citizenship is perhaps immaterial, though before confirming his appointment, it may be as well for the Senate to inquire into this, and some other affairs connected with the man's antecedents and present position.

It is a pity that the country is so destitute of office-seekers willing to serve their country in desirable consulates abroad, that the President has to seek them in Europe.—Sunday Dispatch.

BUSINESS IN RHODE ISLAND.—The Providence Journal publishes a detailed statement of the effects of the panic on manufacturers in Rhode Island. The number of cotton-mills which stopped entirely counted up a total of 302,621 spindles, and employed 9,861 operatives, all of whom were thrown out of employment. The cotton-mills still running number 214,628 spindles, and employ 4,070 workmen. The number of woolen-mills which have been stopped, or are running less than full time, is 55. Eleven woolen-mills are still running full time, employing 1,325 hands. The Journal adds:

"The mills, particularly the woolen, that are stopping, will about equal those that are starting, and the aggregate of suspended labor will not, from present appearances, be greatly changed. A revival of business cannot be looked for till, among other improvements, the noxious clauses of the commission merchants are made more desirable than they are at present."

A MERITED TESTIMONIAL.—The Secretary of State has recently forwarded to the Collector of the Customs at Charleston, South Carolina, a handsome silver tankard, bearing the following inscription: "The President of the United States to W. W. McLaine, Captain of the British ship Star, for his noble and disinterested conduct towards the Captain and crew of the American schooner Northern Light—Captain McLaine having saved them from shipwreck. The recipient of this handsome testimonial returned to Hon. Mr. GERSOCK, through whom the presentation was made, his grateful acknowledgments for the highly flattering and most unexpected notice taken of his act by the American Government.—Washington Union.

A bill to prevent runaway matches has been introduced in the Kentucky Legislature.

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

For Markets see Third Page.

[illegible]

TUESDAY, Dec. 29—P. M.

The business dullness of the Christmas time continues, and the disagreeable nature of the weather to-day, contributed to the inactivity and indifference of the Street. The Stock dealings are moderate in amount, and early in the day the disposition was to rather lower prices. But the tone of the market changed somewhat in the afternoon, and the closing bids were over a fraction higher than on Monday. New-York Central, 73½; Erie, 17½; Rhode Island, 71@71¼; Reading, 54¼@54⅝, cash,; 55, buyer 30 days. The State list was firm, and Railway Bonds steady.

The Exchange market for the Boston mail closed at 109¼@109½ ⅌ cent. for very choice bills, 60 days, and 111¼@111½ for short sight. French bills were done at 5.25@5.20 at 60 days, and 5.11¼@5.15, short sight. The mail is altogether a moderate one, owing to the intervention of the holidays, and the fact that the January dividends remain to be collected and remitted for by the direct steamer on Wednesday of next week. The Gold shipment, for New-York account, by the Boston packet, will be less than half a million of dollars.

The last mail received from the Continent (by the Persia, a few days since) brought advice of the refusal of a number of bills, drawn from this side in November, on Hamburg and Amsterdam. In one or more instances, the bills are understood to have been made against consigned credits, and yet refused acceptance on account of the prevailing financial embarrassment in Europe, and the apprehension, growing out of it, that the bills could not be met at maturity if the same difficulty should continue 30 or 60 days. The circumstances, as far as known, are as little creditable to the parties on the other side as anything short of failure outright could well be. Of course, they are unexpectedly damaging to the credit of the drawers here.

The Bank of Commerce has declared the usual half-yearly dividend of 4 ⅌ cent. for Jan. 4. The Continental Bank 3½ ⅌ cent. The Phœnix Bank 4 ⅌ cent. for Jan. 4. Mechanics' and Farmers' Bank of Albany 5 ⅌ cent. Bank of Albany 5 ⅌ cent. Seventh Ward Bank 5 ⅌ cent. Jan. 5. The January interest on the bonds of Belmont County, Ohio, will be paid by the Nassau Bank. The January Coupon on the Fire and Civil Bonds of San Francisco City will be paid at the office of the Treasurer of the City. The Long Island Bank in Brooklyn will pay the interest on the Brooklyn City loans.

We are requested to state that the notes of the Unadilla Bank are promptly redeemed at the agency in Albany, at the legal rate of one-quarter of one ⅌ cent.

The circulating notes of the Charter Oak Bank of Hartford are again taken at the Metropolitan Bank, the same as other New-England currency.

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $137,292; paid out $246,050, and held at the close $3,496,718.

The value of the exports of the leading articles of domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, for the week ending to-day, is $750,631, against $1,249,775 the corresponding week of last year.

Messrs. THOMPSON, MEARS & Co., quote Land Warrants thus:

	Buying.	Selling.
40 acre warrants, per acre	87c.	93c.
80 acre warrants, per acre	78c.	82c.
120 acre warrants, per acre	68c.	72c.
160 acre warrants, per acre	75c.	80c.

Market active.

The Journal of Commerce says of the stock of flour, now in store in this City:

The stock of flour in this City on the 1st of November, it is conceded, was not far from 350,000 barrels, say ..... 350,000 barrels.
Receipts from Nov. 1 to Dec. 26 1,169,560
Total supply 1,519,560
Local and Eastern trade 35,000 bbls. per week 315,000
Export from this port since Nov. 1 ..... 250,000— 565,000
Leaves stock of flour here Dec. 26 954,560

In the above receipts we have included only such as have arrived by the regular channels of conveyance, and, of course the aggregate is considerably within the exact total, as a number of small lots are daily added through a variety of channels where no account is taken.

The Cotton Trade.

From Wright's Weekly Circular.

(Per Canada.) NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Dec. 29, 1857.

My last circular was dated 22d inst., since which the Persia has arrived with dates to 12th December. Monetary matters were unchanged, and further heavy failures had taken place in London and the Continent. The arrivals of Cotton in Liverpool were liberal, and being placed upon the market as soon as sampled, and perseveringly offered, had caused a decline of ⅛d.@⅛d. ⅌ lb. on sales of the week of 20,000 bales. Middling New-Orleans was quoted at 6¼d.; Mobile, 6¼d.; and Upland, 6d. ⅌ lb. Trade in Manchester was much depressed, and prices for goods and yarns materially lower. Consols were buoyant and closed at 91¾@91⅞.

The business in this City is once more almost at a complete stand; the export demand has ceased, the domestic consumers, who for a few weeks were purchasers to a moderate extent, have withdrawn, and to force sales, a decline upon the annexed quotations would have to be taken. The sales since the 22d inst. to last evening, amount to 1,500 bales, closing at the quotations, which show a decline of ⅛@⅛c. ⅌ lb.
